Learning From America's Experiences

The 'invasion' of the United States Congress on Wednesday 6 January 2021 has left most persons, worldwide, in a state of shock and bewilderment. That the occurrence could have caused such reactions, and to such an extent, is due to the fact that so many persons have been led to believe that America is something other than that which it is.

At page 8 of this edition we are carrying an article captioned 'The US Capitol Raid Exposes The Myth And Pathology Of American Exceptionalism', in which the writer, Professor Robert Pruessen of The University of Toronto, reminds us of several of the atrocities perpetrated over the centuries by those who have governed the land of his birth.

While acknowledging that America has accomplished much that is good and great and, over the years, has made some significant contributions to the world, he shows us that those accomplishments were made on the backs, and through the sufferings and ruthless exploitation of hundreds of millions of people.

From the earliest days of America's 'founding' it is the true majority who suffered terribly, while the minority grew ever richer and enjoyed the 'good' things of life. In his words "Millions of slaves were terrorized and abused beyond imagination. Tens of thousands of Indigenous people were robbed of land, culture, autonomy - and life."

Even as their political leaders and avowed 'reformers and intellectuals' espoused lofty sounding ideals, they invariably made laws and employed other devices which enshrined their real intentions and reinforced the stranglehold of the minority on the majority.

Such an artifice is the Electoral College. The Federalist Papers bear out the fact that it was written into the constitution in order to ensure that if the people elected as president a person who the aristocracy considered in any way unsuitable (or undesirable) the College could be used to eliminate such an individual.

It worked well for the minority over generations, but eventually, in 2016/17 it saddled them with Donald Trump, and they found themselves endlessly bending and twisting, this way and that, often to the point where they no longer knew themselves.

Most persons who belong to the political right-wing really do not care about correctness, what is right, lawful or constitutional, or even what is moral. They are purposeful, concerned with one thing, and one thing only, namely having political power, and go to any lengths, and do anything and everything, to get their get and keep it firmly in their grasp.

The right-wingers then combine the political power with their economic might, and they use both to wield power over the vast majority. That abuse is not limited to America and its people. They extend their control (and the attendant abuses) to the peoples of

SKN Nationals Encouraged To Increase Applications To Study In Taiwan

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETTERRE, St. Kitts (Friday 15th January 2021)- Nationals of St.Kitts-Nevis are being asked to make good on the annual opportunity to apply for scholarship funding provided by the government of the Republic of China (Taiwan) via the 2021 MOFA [Ministry of Foreign Affairs] Taiwan Scholarship and Taiwan ICDF [International Cooperative and Development Fund] International Higher Education Scholarship Program.

Interested applicants seeking a bachelor, master or doctoral degree in Taiwan, are encouraged to apply through the Ministry of Education of St. Kitts and Nevis, observing the March 2021 deadlines.

Individuals 18 years or older with a high school diploma or above are qualified to apply.

Resident Taiwanese

Ambassador Tom Lee in encouraging St.Kitts-Nevis nationals to seek such an opportunity to study in Taiwan, told this reporter: "We are doing very well in terms of COVID-19 not like other countries right now they only allow the distance learning but Taiwan, you can still go to school physically. Secondly, I would say the quality of our education is pretty good."

He also pointed out that it is a "very generous programme" other countries.

When it became clear that Trump had lost the popular vote in the November 2020 general elections, the extremists on the right lost their minds. Hence their attempts to hijack the confirmation process, seize and destroy the states' electoral certificates, and murder the Vice President, the Speaker, and many others.

In many respects those designs and attempts remind us of Saturday 10 June 1967 right here in St Kitts.

Ongoing investigations by The FBI and other agencies, at both the national and state levels, have already turned up information and proof that the whole affair was planned, orchestrated, and incited by persons at the highest levels.

It is now clear that some members of The House of Representatives, and other elected persons, were involved, and one even assisted with a reconnaissance of the legislative chambers the day before, namely Tuesday 5 January.

Reports also implicate the wife of a sitting Justice of The Supreme Court, allegedly paying for buses to transport hundreds of the insurrectionists from distant points to that nation's capital.

What that sordid affair has done, amongst many other things, is to rip away the facade that has been concealing the true nature of so many aspects of matters American. In the words of Professor Pruessen it has exposed the 'Myth And Pathology Of American Exceptionalism'.

We, the people of St Kitts and Nevis, can learn much from America's recent experiences, for we do have similar problems right here at home.

Let us study the whole matter very, very carefully, then develop plans and programmes to take our country back from the right-wing minority.

According to information coming from the Taiwan Embassy, for the MOFA Taiwan scholarship, first year Mandarin learning in Taiwan is mandatory before a degree program starts and all the courses in Taiwan will be conducted in Mandarin except those English programs.

Applicants must finish applying procedures at the Ministry of Education before March 31st, 2021 for onward further review and forwardness to Taiwan.

For more information, persons can contact the Embassy of the Republic of China (Taiwan) at 465-2421 or check the following websites: <https://taiwanscholarship.moe.gov.tw/web/scholarship.aspx#> (Documents Download); <https://www.studyintaiwan.org/> (English Program List) and <https://www.mofa.gov.tw/en> ("Scholarships & Fellowships" part in the "About MOFA").

For the ICDF International Higher Education Scholarship, all the courses in Taiwan will be conducted in English.

Applicants are required to finish applying procedures with the Ministry of Education of St. Kitts and Nevis before March 15th, 2021 for further review and forward to Taiwan.

For more information, persons are asked to check the Taiwan ICDF website at: <http://www.icdf.org.tw/ct.asp?xItem=12505&CtNode=30316&mp=2> and click on the Scholarship Program at flash icon, or contact the Embassy at 465-2421.

Ambassador Lee is calling on more individuals to apply to the ICDF scholarship.

Notably, in 2020 there were thirty-four (34) applicants for MOFA and ten (10) for the ICDF.

Altogether, fourteen nationals were selected with nine MOFA (9) awardees namely Chris Tyson, Clilia Davis, Jacinth Hunkins, Jaleel Browne, Nigel Langley Jr., Selwyn Liburd, Kelso Clarke, Yitzak Bass and Mandisa Orquidia Z.

The five (5) ICDF awardees were: Rondell Williams, Marquan O'Loughlin, Tawanna Collins, Jahdel Danubii and Dylan Jacobs.

Basseterre Street Vendors To Sit On Committee To Address Matters

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETTERRE, St. Kitts (Friday 15th January 2021)- Local vendors on St. Kitts have been listed on a new government committee that is expected to address issues surrounding street vending in the island's capital of Basseterre such as challenges experienced by those differently abled and the elderly as well as overcrowding by unlawful vendors plying their trade.

Prime Minister Dr. Timothy Harris, while speaking at his press conference, held on the morning of Thursday 14th January 2021, made remarks on the subject matter during his opening address in pointing out that street vending "has been a source of public concern for some time."

He informed that "to regain the best of beautiful Basseterre, Cabinet has approved an inter-ministerial committee to examine and report on the matter of street vending."

The committee is said to be a broad based one which includes representatives from the Building Board, the Ministry of Sustainable Development, Justice and Legal Affairs, two vendors, the Royal St. Christopher and Nevis Police Force, the Ministry of Agriculture, the Chamber of Industry and Commerce, the Transportation Board, the Inland Revenue Department and the Ministry of Health.

Speaking about the make-up of the committee, Dr. Harris explained: "What we have attempted to do is to capture the intergovernmental framework that deals with all the issues that emanate from street vending- Law enforcement, the cleaning up afterwards, the health consequences, the consequences for traffic for having our streets overlaid etcetera... all of those we have attempted to capture and we've sort to give those who are actively involved an opportunity for their voices to be heard in the committee. The government's efforts then would be to bring a comprehensive response, relying on what has worked; the all of society approach in this regard."

On the topic of street vending in Basseterre, he had this to say: "The overcrowding of our street in Basseterre by illegitimate vending, the exposure of our differently abled and elderly to risks and hazards to the improper placement of vending facilities in Basseterre must now be controlled."

He added: "In our view, what is taking place in Basseterre is not consistent with our vision of a beautiful and friendly city which allows pedestrians and motorists orderly, easy and safe access throughout our city."

PM Harris stated that his government is in favour of small businesses plying their legitimate trade.

"Infact, we encourage entrepreneurship, and it has been really amazing to see the growth in official businesses, that is, people registering [and] getting their licences etcetera year after years."

He said last year (2020) there was a record high of over eight hundred business licences being approved by the Ministry of finance whilst noting that there were 600 plus the year (2019) and about 400 at the end of 2014 to which he observed "so we have come a very significant way."

Shark Attack Victim Shares Update With Public

Veterinary Medicine.

Local officials say the incident took place in the Narrows of St. Kitts-Nevis sometime between 9:00am and 10:00 am on Saturday 10th January 2021.

Readers to Brook's gofundme.com-organized by Paige Toussaint - learnt on Tuesday 12th January 2021 that she (Brook) was about to begin her final semester of didactic learning at the Ross University when "Unfortunately, due to a scuffle with a shark, those plans have changed."

As told: "On Saturday, January 9, 2021, Brook was attacked by a tiger shark while on her exercise swim with her Saturday Swim Group. She sustained injuries to her left leg where it attacked, as well as her right hand that she used to fight it off- punching it in the nose and trying to gouge its eyes. After an amazing rescue by the kayakers and swimmers of the group, the coast guard took her to the hospital for emergency surgery. She has since been transported to Houston where she is being closely monitored. The recovery process will be tough and lengthy, so we appreciate any donations as expenses are likely to be significant."

On the morning of Wednesday 13th January, Toussaint gave additional details since Brook "would like everyone to know."

The update read: "Good morning y'all, I know my original post didn't really give the best status of Brook's leg, but she would like everyone to know..The damage done by the tiger shark was too much to be repaired. There were no pulses below the bite, so they had to amputate. The shark's last bite was 2 inches above her knee, so they've cut above that."

Toussaint continued: "Blood loss was significant so she's received two blood transfusions, but those levels look good now, so she shouldn't need more. She's seeing a physical therapist and an occupational therapist while she's in the hospital, and we're looking into a rehabilitation center for her to go to once released."

"Thank you so much for the prayers and the donations. We have received so much support and are appreciative of the many groups and individuals showing such kindness."

Up to Thursday 14th January, there was $48,889 raised of a $100,000 goal following the contributions by 567 donors.

Ineffective 'Learning Styles' Theory Persists In Education

A new review by Swansea University reveals there is widespread belief, around the world, in a teaching method that is not only ineffective but may actually be harmful to learners.

For decades educators have been advised to match their teaching to the supposed 'learning styles' of students. There are more than 70 different classification systems, but the most well-known (VARK) sees individuals being categorised as visual, auditory, read-write or kinesthetic learners.

However, a new paper by Professor Phil Newton, of Swansea

University Medical School, highlights that this ineffective approach is still believed by teachers and calls for a more evidence-based approach to teacher-training.

He explained that various reviews, carried out since the mid-2000s, have concluded there is no evidence to support the idea that matching instructional methods to the supposed learning style of a student does improve learning.

Professor Newton said: "This apparent widespread belief in an ineffective teaching method that is also potentially harmful has caused concern among the education community."

His review, carried out with Swansea University student Atharva Salvi, found a substantial majority of educators, almost 90 per cent, from samples all over the world in all types of education, reported that they believe in the efficacy of learning styles.

But the study points out that a learner could be a risk of being pigeonholed and consequently lose their motivation as a result.

He said: "For example, a student categorized as an auditory learner may end up thinking there is no point in pursuing studies in visual subjects such as art, or written subjects like journalism and then be demotivated during those classes."

An additional concern is the creation of unwarranted and unrealistic expectations among educators.

Professor Newton said: "If students do not achieve the academic grades they expect, or do not enjoy their learning; if students are not taught in a way that matches their supposed learning style, then they may attribute these negative experiences to a lack of matching and be further demotivated for future study."

He added: "Spending time trying to match a student to a learning style could be a waste of valuable time and resources."

The paper points out that there are many other teaching methods which demonstrably promote learning and are simple and easy to learn, such as use of practice tests, or the spacing of instruction, and it would be better to focus on promoting them instead.

In the paper, published in journal Frontiers in Education the researchers detail how they conducted a review of relevant studies to see if the data does suggest there is confusion.

They found 89.1 per cent of 15,045 educators believed that individuals learn better when they receive information in their preferred learning style.

He said: "Perhaps the most concerning finding is that there is that Heyliger, Merritt and other persons were in a shed when an individual shot both men."

To date, a suspect has been taken into police custody for questioning in regard to a recent shooting incident at Lower Thibou Avenue in Central Basseterre that resulted in double murder of two young men from the community.

Two days later on Wednesday 13th January, the police public relations department informed that "one person is in custody assisting Police with investigations into a fatal shooting incident that occurred at Lower Thibou Avenue."

On the day in question, police say several units responded and that upon arrival, Heyliger's motionless body was met laying on the ground with what appeared to be multiple gunshot wounds about the body.

Police say Merritt sustained a gunshot wound to the head and was transported to the JNF General Hospital via the Emergency Medical Service ambulance.

Preliminary investigations so far have revealed that Heyliger, Merritt and other persons were in a shed when an individual shot both men.

The District Medical Officer arrived at the scene and pronounced Heyliger dead while Merritt succumbed to his injuries that same night.

Personnel from the Forensic Services Unit processed the scene and collected items of evidential value. Investigations into the matter are ongoing.

Persons with information regarding this matter are urged to contact the Violent Crime Unit by dialing 467-1887, 467-1888, 662-3468, their nearest Police Station or the Crime Hotline at 707 where information can be given anonymously.

The deaths of Heyliger and Merritt are the first recorded homicides for 2021 in St.Kitts-Nevis.

The US Capitol Raid Exposes The Myth And Pathology Of American Exceptionalism

By Professor Ronald W Pruessen, University of Toronto

DC National Guard as they stood outside The Capitol after Trump supporters stormed the building on 6 January 2021 in an attempt to overturn the US presidential election results. Photo credit: John Minchillo (AP).

Looking at Donald Trump's dangerous behaviour since he lost the presidential election, it's hard not to recall an observation John Kelly made in 2018.

"He's an idiot," the former White House chief of staff said. "He's gone off the rails. We're in Crazytown."

"Crazytown" is not a one-man phenomenon, however: consider Trump's 74 million votes, Republican conspiracy theories, Ted Cruz-led Senate shenanigans and the assault on The US Capitol by those who'd come to Washington to disrupt the congressional endorsement of the election results.

The departing president should be seen as the avatar of American attitudes and behavioural predispositions, both widespread and deeply rooted.

In a famous 1933 lecture, "The Dissection of the Psychical Personality," Sigmund Freud said: "Pathology, by making things larger and coarser, can draw our attention to normal conditions which would otherwise have escaped us. ... If we throw a crystal to the floor, it breaks; but not into haphazard pieces. It comes apart along its lines of cleavage into fragments whose boundaries, though they were invisible, were predetermined by the crystal's structure."

Freud was clearly talking about individuals in this lecture, but it can be applied to political and social affairs in 1933: countries broken by the Great Depression and the rise of Adolf Hitler.

As a historian I am also intrigued by what Freud's observations tell us about Trump's homeland.

Diagnostic tool

Greek and Latin roots of the word "pathology" signal the study of passions and diseases - and the substantial popularity of Trump's extreme policies and behaviours offers a valuable diagnostic tool for identifying American pathologies.

To borrow from Freud, think of the United States as a "crystal." A glittering crystal to many minds - a "shining city on a hill," as former president Ronald Reagan often described it, drawing on early Puritan imagery - widely celebrated through three centuries as being exceptional for its commitment to liberty, equality, opportunity, the rule of law, economic and cultural innovation.

But the self-celebration of American exceptionalism has been hard to stomach during the past four years as Trump and phalanxes of enablers (including congressional Republicans) and admirers (including maskshunning Make America Great Again adherents) have chipped away at core values and past glories. Before Joe Biden's election, it was all too easy to imagine that the foundations of the famed city on a hill were crumbling - that the crystal was falling and shattering.

Without minimizing Trump-era damage, however, Freud's reference to "lines of cleavage" that were "predetermined by the crystal's structure" deserves attention.

Make no mistake: American attributes and achievements are real - opportunity and tolerance for many, for example, offering pathways to education and economic success as well as escapes from wars and persecution.

But "many" has never been "all" - and at every point in American history, the number of people unable to share in the country's blessings has been tragically large.

The true majority

In the earliest days of the republic, in fact, those who were constrained or had pain and death inflicted upon them were the true majority. National mythology tends to pay scant attention to the founding decades in which women - fully half of the population - had no rights. Millions of slaves were terrorized and abused beyond imagination. Tens of thousands of Indigenous people were robbed of land, culture, autonomy - and life.

Just like today, ideals were lauded in the 19th century - sincerely in many cases - by political leaders, reformers and intellectuals: Thomas Jefferson, John Quincy Adams, Ralph Waldo Emerson, William Lloyd Garrison, Elizabeth Cady Stanton. Ideals had some impact too: witness the end of slavery. But the impact was limited as persistent prejudices and predispositions further deepened the cleavages that went on marring the shining crystal. Some flaws are particularly glaring and damaging, and persist today.

"Jim Crow" laws, rural lynchings and urban riots made it clear that systemic racism hardly ended with the Civil War. Indigenous Americans "squalid savages," according to former president Theodore Roosevelt, whose face is carved onto Mount Rushmore) have also been continuously subjected to brutal land grabs and cultural devastation.

Former president Richard Nixon's "southern strategy" brought racism politics into the late 20th century, with reinforcement by Reagan and others. Reagan, in fact, once grumbled - to Nixon - about anti-American rhetoric at the United Nations: "To see those, those monkeys from those African nations - damn them, they're still uncomfortable wearing shoes."

Mali President Moussa Traore and his wife join as they joined Ronald and Nancy Reagan at a state dinner at The White House in October 1988. Photo credit: Scott Applewhite (AP).

Chinese exclusion actions beginning in 1882 and "yellow peril" postulations became part of a broader xenophobic impulse in 20th century America. This included tightened overall immigration restrictions in the 1920s, resistance to welcoming Jewish emigres in the 1930s, and Japanese internment camps and Zoot Suit riots against Latinos in the 1940s. Anti-Muslim and anti-refugee agitations in the 21st century - as well as the "China flu" labelling so embraced by Trump - have been tapping into deep wellsprings.

Treatment of women

The treatment of women remains another crack in the crystal of American ideals.

Not until 1920 were women across the country able to vote; it wasn't until the 1930s that a woman was appointed to a cabinet post (Frances Perkins as secretary of labor). Not yet have women achieved even an approximate proportionate presence in Congress or corporate headquarters; women still currently hold less than 30 per cent of seats in Congress.

Such deeply rooted prejudices and passions have always dimmed the glowing aura of American values and achievements. They also continue to risk the crystal breakage that Freud's description of pathology suggests.

Antique chisels and hammers remain at hand - and Trump allies and wannabes are still energetically wielding them. This is not a problem unique to the United States, of course, but its historic character warrants more attention than the departing president's talent for monopolizing the spotlight, throwing tantrums and inciting violence often allows.

About the author: Dr Ronald W Pruessen is currently Professor of History at The University of Toronto, where he has served as The Munk School of Global Affairs and Public Policy's Director for International Partnerships & Research, and as Chair of the Department of History. In 1968 he was admitted to the degree of Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) by The University of Pennsylvania. His primary research and teaching interests are in 20th century US foreign policy and international relations. Early work focused on the Cold War (eg, John Foster Dulles: To the Threshold, 1888-1952), but attention to both transatlantic relations and US-China tensions led him toward research on the overarching global perspectives of post-1945 US policy makers, as well as the historical roots of 'globalization'. Professor Pruessen has also developed a strong interest in the relevance of historical research and analysis to the definition of current global challenges and the design of policies to address them. His current research projects include 'Cake Walks with Tigers: Choosing War and Making Mistakes, from John Adams to Donald Trump'. The book-length study places the Iraq and Afghanistan wars into a longer-term trajectory of misguided decisions, considering both the consequences and the sources of problematic policy-making. Particular attention is paid to a penchant for amnesia in American leaders and citizens - a resistance to seriously engaging with historic experiences when confronting new challenges. BASSETTERRE, ST. KITTS, January 12, 2021 (DBSKN) — At a time when the global fight against the coronavirus pandemic appears not to be abating anytime soon especially with the emergency of new variants of the virus, the Development Bank of St. Kitts and Nevis has stepped up its Covid-19 fight using the latest technology.

“The Development Bank of St. Kitts and Nevis is leading the charge in the Federation in the combatting of the spread of the novel coronavirus by using the latest in thermal scanning technologies and adjustments in their standard of operating procedures (SOP) and policies,” said Mr. Michael Peets of Digital Security Services Ltd.

Thermal imaging cameras have been installed by Digital Security Services Ltd at the Bank's head office at the corner of Church and Central Streets in Basseterre, St. Kitts, and at the branch office on Chapel Street in Charlestown, Nevis. The cameras allow for clients' temperature to be taken without any contact as they are mounted on the wall, eight feet above the ground.

“What we have here is our thermal imaging solution,” explained Mr Peets after the installation of the thermal camera at the head office in Basseterre. “What it does is measure the temperature as you walk through the door and come into the establishment - this is a contactless solution.”

Security guards and frontline staff members at the head office and at the branch office have been trained on how to use a tablet to retrieve the information from the cameras if need be. According to Mr Peets, that information is important when it comes to contact tracing should any client show signs of the disease and can also be shared with the Ministry of Health.

Trained include Manager Human Resource Unit Ms Danienne Brin, Manager Management Information System Unit Mr Laurinston Matthew, Management Systems Technical Officer Mr Eldean Huggins, Marketing and Product Development Officer Ms Chantelle Rochester, Customer Service Representatives Ms Vershary Hanley and Mr Raheem Rogers, and Security Guard Ms Terrianne Bahadur of Alpha and Omega Security Solutions in St. Kitts.

Exposed to the training in Nevis include Branch Manager Ms Hyacinth Pemberton, Customer Service Representatives Ms Tywana Cranston and Mr Chemor Bartlette, and Security Guard Mr Lincoln Dyer of Alpha and Omega Security Solutions.

Human Resource Manager at the Development Bank of St. Kitts and Nevis, Ms Danienne Brin, has said that guidelines on how the thermal cameras will be used have been circulated and all clients are fully aware that when they enter the establishment they will have their temperatures taken using the new cameras.

“We are now in the second week since the implementation and we are very pleased with how the clients are responding to it,” said Ms Brin. “The guidelines basically outline that once you enter into the bank as per usual you have to have on your mask. Our security personnel will sanitise your hands or the dispenser is also there if you want to do it on your own, and the security person will then direct you to a marked area where you would stand and position yourself to look up to our camera, which will take your picture and temperature.”

If the temperature is normal, the camera will release a recorded message ‘testing pass’ and the client would be allowed to proceed on to their appointments or discussions with their respective officers. However, should the temperature be elevated the recorded message will be ‘warning high temperature’ and at this stage the client would be requested to take a seat for about five minutes to cool off before they are asked to come forward to have their temperature taken again.

“The temperature is displayed and the client could actually see it on the screen as opposed to someone else telling them what their temperature is,” observed Ms Brin. “Once testing is done a second time, and it is within normal range, then you can move beyond in the institution freely based on your appointment's schedule. If it is elevated still, you will be asked to touch base with your respective officer whether by telephone or by email and that officer would determine the best way possible to serve you given this elevated temperature that you would now have.”

Both Ms Brin and the Manager at the Nevis Branch Office, Ms Hyacinth Pemberton, note that they are pleased with the way the cameras have been operating stating that the only time red flags would have been raised would have been due to a client's elevated temperature as a result of being out in the hot sun for a lengthy period, as a second reading would be normal.

“As part of the Covid-19 fight at the Nevis branch office we moved a step ahead when it comes to the implementation of the Covid-19 protocols,” noted Ms Pemberton. “We relocated to new offices on Chapel Street in August of last year and when the building was being refurbished, permanent social distancing markers were included outside the office leading to the front door. Clients have to abide with those marking before they come into the establishment and this has worked out very well.”

Groundbreaking Research Could Provide Key To Kicking Smoking Habit For Good

By Erin Flynn, Western Michigan University

Quitting smoking tops many New Year's resolution lists, but a nicotine addiction is hard to curb.

"People try to go cold turkey all the time. The problem is that there are withdrawal symptoms," says Dr Ricky Stull, assistant professor of chemistry at Western Michigan University, whose breakthrough research lays the groundwork for a potential solution. His work advances a strategy of using enzymes to degrade nicotine in the body, flushing it from the system without any adverse effects.

Stull's research, published in the journal Nature Chemical Biology, corrects a fatal flaw in an animal study that generated global buzz in 2018. The original study found rats addicted to nicotine - when injected with a lab-engineered form of the enzyme NicA2, which occurs naturally in bacteria found in tobacco fields - kicked their addiction.

"They didn't have any evidence of relapse, any evidence of withdrawal - all great things," Stull says. "But there was a problem with the NicA2 enzyme in that study. The enzyme, as they were using it, degraded nicotine so slowly they had to use outrageous amounts in order to see all these beneficial effects; you could never translate it to people."

The NicA2 enzyme requires an electron acceptor in order to degrade nicotine. Stull, with the help of undergraduate lab assistant Chris Clark and collaborators at the University of Michigan, uncovered researchers had incorrectly assumed molecular oxygen was the electron acceptor for the enzyme.

"My research was showing oxygen wasn't the acceptor for the enzyme. Instead we found a cytochrome protein, which is part of the electron transport chain and is normally used to produce energy within the cells, is the natural electron acceptor," says Clark, who is pursuing bachelor's degrees in chemical engineering and biochemistry. "I found if you use the cytochrome c as the electron acceptor, you need far less NicA2 to get the beneficial loss of nicotine addiction."

The result could be monumental for the millions of tobacco users who know the habit is bad for their health but are struggling to quit.

"I think the application where this would most be useful would be in an individual who is attempting to quit smoking and is at high risk of relapse," Stull says, giving an example of someone trying to quit smoking who slips during a social event with friends. Generally, introducing nicotine back into their body would trigger the addiction in their brain. "If they're being treated with this enzyme during a re-exposure event, the nicotine would not actually reach their brain, which would prevent them from becoming addicted once again."

There's plenty more to learn about why the enzyme is able to reduce concentration of nicotine in the blood without triggering withdrawal. The next step in the process will be for scientists to put Stull and Clark's research into practice through testing to determine its viability, but the breakthrough could also have wider implications.

"This is one of the first - if not the first - cases that we've proven oxygen is not the native electron acceptor for an enzyme in this family," Clark says.

Discoveries like this are what got him excited about the field. Admittedly bored and disinterested in classes in high school and thus doing poorly academically, Clark didn't get accepted to Western on his first try because of a low GPA. After taking some classes at a community college and buckling down on his studies, he was admitted on his second try with plans to be a chemical engineer. His interest evolved as he was exposed to more classes involving living systems.

"I found the complexity and not being confined to rules that are often common in life sciences very appealing because it's very complicated and always evolving," says Clark. "Living things are exciting because sometimes the rules we think we know are completely wrong."

By broadening his horizons and diversifying his scientific research at WMU, Clark is also contributing to the development of potentially life-saving therapeutics.

"Tobacco use is the leading cause of preventable illness in the world," Stull says. "If we could come up with a new treatment that can help people get over their nicotine addiction or tobacco use, we could make a pretty big impact on human health."

no evidence that this belief is decreasing."

Professor Newton suggests history is repeating itself: "If educators are themselves screened using learning styles instruments as students then it seems reasonable that they would then enter teacher-training with a view that the use of learning styles is a good thing, and so the cycle of belief would be self-perpetuating."

The study concludes that belief in matching instruction to learning styles remains high.

He said: "There is no sign that this is declining, despite many years of work, in the academic literature and popular press, highlighting this lack of evidence.

However, he also cautioned against over-reaction to the data, much of which was derived from studies where it may not be clear that educators were asked about specific

From The Supervisor of Elections

Vol II. Issue No 7: The Objection Process

As we prepare to release the Annual Register of Voters due out by 31st January, it is timely to discuss the process of objections that this list may give rise to. It is important to do so as, under my watch, the office was challenged twice at the High Court - in December 2017 and in June 2020. Both times the challenge was not the rightness or wrongness of the decision, but rather whether the process was followed.

Objections result in hearings. They are magisterial in nature in that they are evidence based. Notice I said evidence, i.e. information provided under oath, and preferably via affidavit. In fact, until recently, hearings were only conducted at the magistrate's courts.

An objection to a registration must be made on Form 8/9, available at the Electoral Office. It would help if the objector state more than that the voter "never lived" at the address given. It is preferable to add the address where the person is said to live. This statement that must be elaborated at the hearing, under oath. He who objects has 10 days from the posting of the list to do so.

Notwithstanding, whatever cause is presented for the objection, the person being objected to, the objectee, is notified of the objection on Form 12. This form advises the registrant of the time and place where the hearing is to be held and invites him/her to attend. The notice ends by giving the Registration Officer the authority to make a decision one way or the other, even if the objectee does not attend.

The form does not require the identity of the objector. This notice, by law, must be sent out, either by registered mail or in writing of which there is evidence that it has been received by the objectee. We have started to deliver these specific notices by Bailiffs, who provide notice of delivery via a sworn affidavit of service. Also, by law, these notices must be delivered within 15 days of the receipt of the objection.

These timelines are critically important as they can be a determining factor in court challenges. This was so the case(s) of 2013.

On Form 13, the objector is also notified of the date and time of the hearing, and advised that unless the objector appears, the matter shall be determined in his/her absence.

The law gives the Registration Officer an option of verifying the information presented. The language is instructive: "the Officer may, before considering the objection, carry out an investigation and visit the address in question for the purpose of ascertaining whether the person resides there."

Like any other court case, the law places the burden of proof on the objector; the objectee has no obligation to defend but can do so if he/she wishes. Upon hearing the objection and a decision is reached and communicated, the aggrieved party has the right

POOR MAN'S POCKET WINS BIG

BASSETTERRE, ST KITTS, January 14th 2021 - On Sunday 10th January, Gejoe's Chill Spot played host to the official prize giving ceremony marking the end of the first installment of the Federation's newest and most exciting domino tournament.

The brief ceremony saw the distribution of thousands of dollars in cash and prizes including the coveted first place trophy to Poor Man's Pocket Domino Club, which took home a cheque for $1500.00 as well as several individual prizes including the 'Highest Scoring Female Player'.

Samal Duggins, who had the honour of presenting the prizes on behalf of title sponsor,

These steps are prescribed to ensure the hallmark of our electoral system; that is one person one vote in the right place and fairness to all.

Montraville Farms, recorded his gratitude to the participants, the organizing committee and the domino enthusiasts who supported the tournament throughout its three-month run.

Duggins stated, "When we started this journey three months ago the idea was to give back to the community but we never imagined that the community would have given us so much. What we received in the last three months could never be explained in words and could never be quantified in cash or prizes. We came in as sponsors and three months later we are family."

Duggins also handed out tokens of appreciation to the committee members including committee chairman, Cuthbert "Cutie" Caines, who ably hosted the ceremony.

The vote of thanks was delivered by Colleen Fyfield who made special mention of the participating venues: Gejoes

Protect Your Health Against Corona: Log-off Catastrophic News Networks (CNNs)

Patrick Martin

Rates of coronavirus infection and deaths are raging in parts of the world. Persons who are afraid of missing “Breaking News” are glued to CNNs - television and internet.

Constant exposure to catastrophic news can be harmful to health. Eye strain is caused by overexposure to light energy. Vivid images of death and destruction stimulate brain circuits to release cascades of chemical mediators. Negative consequences include anxiety, panic attacks, asthma, high blood pressure, high blood sugar and stomach hyperacidity.

Furthermore, being a “couch potato” leads to expanding, fatty girth - a diabetes risk.

The captains of CNNs are shark-like in their predation of unsuspecting humans. They make huge profits by using key words and captions known to lockdown a person’s attention.

“Don’t go away, we’ll be right back with the latest on the virus”. “Click here for a free gift and the very latest”. These, and kindred megabytes of predatory communication so mesmerize affected viewers and listeners that good news is blocked by disbelief.

CNNs hardly present good news. Good news does not sell advertisements. What sells is the death count - fast approaching 400,000 in the USA. What does not sell is good news that the number recovered in the same USA is over 14 million.

Good news is that cricket is being played in parts of Australia and New Zealand - no mask, no physical distancing. Taiwan, a stone’s throw from Wuhan, has remained lockdown-free. Island nations like St. Kitts and Nevis are destinations for COVID refugees.

There is more good news: our lands of beauty abound with nature’s soothing colours and sounds. When sunlight energy penetrates the skin, Vitamin D, a powerful immune system booster, is produced in adequate quantities (no need to buy cod liver oil).

“Food is medicine and medicine is food”. The Caribbean has an outstanding array of medicinal plants otherwise known collectively as bush tea. The colours found in Caribbean fruits and vegetables are actually all the vitamins and minerals needed

Nevisian scholarship awardee appreciative of opportunity to study Graphic Design in Romania

NIA CHARLESTOWN NEVIS (January 13, 2020) — Miss Kianna Lawrence of Nisbett Settlement in Newcastle, Nevis, says she is proud to be the first Nevisian awarded a scholarship to study in Romania.

The scholarship was for a stronger, safer, healthier present and future.

awarded by the Romanian Government to pursue studies in Graphic Design at the West University of Timisoara. Ms. Lawrence expressed appreciation for the opportunity to further her studies.

“I am a proud recipient of the Romanian Scholarship which affords me the opportunity to pursue a Bachelors’ Degree in Graphic Design at the West University of Timisoara. I am both humbled and ecstatic to be one of the first recipients of this Romanian Scholarship as I have always dreamt of studying in Europe.

“Europe is known for its architecture and design, hence gaining knowledge and experience from this region would be a steppingstone in advancing my career. Research is an open door to success, however, to be successful you must take advantage of every opportunity that can help you achieve your goal,” she said.

The scholarship recipient also urged others to take advantage of opportunities to advance their career goal.

“Many persons have asked me ‘why are you going so far?’ My simple reply is “the USA is also far. - Never turn down an opportunity to achieve your goals, regardless of how far you must go to achieve them. Trust in God and he will direct your path,” she said.

Ms. Lawrence was awarded the scholarship by the Romanian state through the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

A BRIGHT, YOUTHFUL,
PROSPEROUS, CHANGEFUL,
NEW YEAR 2021 - Part 2

By:
Earle Clarke

“We all live in the protection of certain cowardices, which we call our principles:” - Mark Twain.

Dear reader, the New Year has started with great uncertainties and it can be said that I have begun criticizing the population. I am a very positive thinking person and that is why my criticizing the population is so fair. I am not without sin, but I am an honest sinner. I call a spade a spade. This has not magnetized me to people, but they respect the person who I am. My criticisms are intended for the population to emerge as unbiased referees, blowing their whistle thunderously, whenever they observe an infringement occurring on the political field of play. By being unbiasedly professional, the respect of every player and spectator would be gained and the country would be running professionally, because those who govern us would know that the heads of the population are not buried in the sand and they cannot hoodwink us.

This constant awareness would keep those who govern us on their toes, thereby resulting in good governance and Real People’s Democracy. In this way, we the population and the Electorate would be able to place those who are offering their services to represent us in Government under a microscope. No longer would we have those who were deemed unfit to hold public office by a Commission of Inquiry, those who were found guilty of misappropriation of their client’s funds, those who were caught on camera selling our lands to a foreigner, those who were riddled with the Herpes, Stem cell, Chinese fugitive, shoes and expensive watch scandals, be elected and re-elected to our Parliament.

We would have decent men and women representing us as under Robert Llewellyn Bradshaw, Caleb Azariah Southwell, Lee Llewellyn Moore, Denzil Llewellyn Douglas Labour Party. Do you realize dear reader, the caliber, the quality of men the Labour Party presented to the Electorate? Has the Labour Part ever produced representatives who defamed our country by bringing horrible names to it like Devil’s Island? Has anyone in the Labour Party ever been riddled with Shoes and Expensive watch Scandals? So, why then do we continue to elect these men of dubious characters? Are we made of the same mettle as they are why we elect them? Is there nothing wrong nor right nowadays and everything goes once the price is right?

In our last General Elections, money flowed like water. A fellow from a certain Bank could be seen travelling West to a certain area every afternoon, dishing out cash and making all kind of promises to unqualified people, in order to advance the winning prospect of a certain candidate. At he swearing in ceremony of the newly elected candidates, the officiating Minister of religion mentioned about the bribing which took place during the just concluded General Elections and not one other pastor supported him. We all live here; we all knew what went wrong with the State of Emergency hanging over our heads, thereby creating an unfavourable disadvantage for the Labour Party, yet, some men and women of the cloth claimed that the June 05, 2020 General Elections were free and fair? But how could that be?

No foreign observers which is the norm, were invited in, who, despite the COVID-19 Pandemic, could have been brought in and quarantined and in place for the Elections. Instead, locals from the churches whose consciences are dead and who are afraid to call sin by its right name, were used to oversee the elections. As is expected, they did not observe the shenanigans which took place. The names of the persons whom the Supervisor of Elections trained to work in the Elections, when were submitted, did not find favour with some Government Officials and were instantly rejected and he lacking in testicular fortitude, did not object to the rejection of his trained personnel and it is widely believed that the Supervisor of Elections is supposed to be an independent, unbiased referee, ready, willing and able. to defend his integrity by.

In the 15th December 2020 Budget Address, the Government tried to hide the payment of 31 million Dollars to gang members, but the skillfulness of Dr. Denzil Douglas, Leader of the Opposition, forced them to accept the fact that they were indeed paying gang members to keep the peace; but, before this skillful maneuver, they were denying the rumours, because such activities cannot be kept a secret in this small society.

It is then that we heard how many murders took place under the Labour Administration and comparing the difference between now and then that they are paying the gangs. But they were rejoicing when the murders were occurring and I personally believe that the gangs were being egged on, because it suited their political agenda then.

C.J.Walwyn, the then Commissioner of Police was trying his utmost to bring gang members to together and he was achieving some results, because I attended a few of those meetings where I witnessed gang members shaking hands; but this was not in the best interest of the unity mirage, who would have nothing to parade about, plus those of us who exhibited No Love or Loyalty for Country. We preferred to see the country self-destruct, because, in our dead conscience state, we were getting at Dr. Douglas. We were never consciously aware of, “COUNTRY ABOVE SELF!” Smash up the country to get rid of Dr. Douglas and Labour.

Let me ask this foolish question? If those in PAM and the unity mirage did not bear any LOVE or LOYALTY for the Country then, would they have any for it now? Isn’t it evident that they are all in it to see how much they can get? If you did not display LOVE and LOYALTY to your Country when it was in crisis, where would you now find that LOVE, that LOYALTY to express for it? What about the Land for Debt Swap which was so atrociously disastrous for the Country and which was to be repealed upon entering office, has it been repealed as yet? What about Canada restoring free visa entry for Kittitians into the Country, has it been restored after almost SIX YEARS IN office?

These were supposed to be priorities. Dr. Douglas was accused as being the reason why Canada withdrew its visa free entry, but he is out of office now for nigh SIX YEARS and it has not been restored, so, what is the set back? Is there any outcry over the fact that we have been hoodwinked? Our consciences are dead; we have been bought; there is nothing called right or wrong anymore; the new order of the day now is, “ANYTHING GOES!” See what happened to Donald Trump? Nobody criticized him when he withdrew from the JCPOA, nobody criticized him when he tightened the economic rope around the neck of Cuba which has trained the professionals of THIRD WORLD COUNTRIES FREE OF COST, see what he has done to Capitol Hill? WAKE UP KITTITIANS - NEVISIAN!

GUNS, PEACE AND ELECTIONS

By: FAIR SHARE FOR ALL

I get very upset every time that I have to talk and write about all these unlicensed firearms that are on the road. How can it make sense to boast that peace is on but young men are still being shot and killed? These firearms are not the ones that cost $350.00 a year to renew the license. These firearms are firearms that were on the road before the peace was on and firearms that were bought since the peace is on.

Apart from the thirty useless, obsolete museum artifacts that were handed in when the Peace Treaty was signed, correct me if I'm wrong but I have not heard of another illegal firearm being taken off the streets.

We can't have a Peace Treaty in place and allow all involved to hold on to their illegal firearms and then act surprised when people get gunned down. That makes a complete mockery of the Peace Treaty.

That is why for a while now we have been hearing of shots being fired in St. Peter's and somebody's head being grazed by a bullet. One inch closer and we would have had a dead man. Shots were also fired in Lime Kiln and up Phillip's and someone got shot in Nevis while walking his dog and another was gunned down.

Common sense alone would tell us that it is not the same person nor the same illegal firearm that is being used in all of these different locations. I have even heard stories that when, on the very rare occasion that the police find one of the peace keepers with an illegal weapon, for the person to get bailed he has to turn in four more illegal firearms.

Now tell me which one of these peace keepers is going to turn in all of his weapons when nobody else is doing so? So even when/if he gives the police five weapons, he does so because he has at least five more in his possession. And that is why it is not unreasonable to conclude that many peace keepers are using their peace money to arm themselves.

Maybe it's just me but something seems definitely very wrong with this picture. Armed peace keepers can't make sense.

And even if the peace keepers were gambling as the stories suggest, they are supposed to be keeping the peace. Surely, no one can be suggesting that every time there is some hard talk or difference of opinion shots will bark and some one of the peace keepers could very well get gunned down. That don't sound like keeping the peace at all to me.

So what is the solution? How can we get the peace keepers to really keep the peace? Obviously if they don't have guns they can't shoot one another. But it doesn't seem as if the trust is there among the peace keepers for them to turn in every single one of their guns to the authorities.

Or could it be that the authorities plan to use them once again as they were used in 2015?

* Raggedy Ann done tell Humpty Dumpty dat if he ain't renew she contract she gon buss de drum and talk what she know.

* She say dat she nutton to do wid how old she be. She younger dan ole Mother Hubbard and de man who very petty. She say all a dem a dye dey hair so dey carn give her no wud. So anytime Humpty Dumpty don't renew she contract, it gon be hell to tell de priest.

* She say dat she carn believe dat after all what she done do for dem is dis kinda knock bout she getting from dem. She say she had was to threaten to expose dem for dem to put back on she roof. All now so she woulda still have tarpoleon over she Ashley furnitures if she never did leggo she mout.

* De sports man say dat he carn believe what he come to. He say dat after he done help dem abandon de school, he carn believe dat dey abandon him and mek him had was to go up de factory go look wuk.

* Humpty Dumpty tek way de young lady husband but dey say he give her a big promotion. Dey say dat don't care whether de man on or off duty he does have to put on he uniform because Humpty Dumpty say dat de uniform does excite him.

* Through Humpty Dumpty carn get enough a de uniform, de man tief a ton rate a money from him and up to now Humpty Dumpty ain't pick he teeth.

* De massive fella say dat he gon stop call een like once upon a time because he doing dat for Humpty Dumpty to study him and nutton he do wukking. He say it look like he have to learn Spanish or come a police for him to get a little attention.

* De fallen angel tell de massive fella dat he coulda warn him bout Humpty Dumpty. He say dat after every cabinet Humpty Dumpty use to send him to buy $7 chiney wid sauce because de cabinet food never did enough for him. He say dem time he couldna get he peace for Humpty Dumpty.

* De fallen angel tell him dat dey use to go walking every day before de sun rise. Now de Spanish, de police and de young man in de East is de only people who he have time for now.
