Our Country Needs The Sound Leadership of Labour

For some weeks now the people of this beloved country of ours, St Kitts and Nevis, have been treated to the sordid spectacle of members of the governing 'regime' openly 'at war' amongst themselves.

Elsewhere in the world persons of honour would have resigned in disgust, reported on the matter to the electorate, and done whatever was necessary to restore the governance of the country to some semblance of normalcy.

It seems as if, for the time being at least, the people would be within their rights to assume that there is no person of honour in the regime, not even one! Let us all hope that such is NOT really the case.

The matter has attracted international attention, and it paints us in a very bad light.

A few days ago, via YouTube, CARIBUPDATE presented an analysis that was stinging in its criticism the whole matter, pointing out that, in the given circumstances, anywhere else the prime minister would have assembled his cabinet and offered his resignation.

Clearly, in present day St. Kitts and Nevis, that is NOT going to happen.

It will be recalled that in last Friday's editorial we pointed out that there is a sufficient number of cabinet members to go to the

Editor's note: Sunday is the fourth one of Lent and marks the beginning of the fourth week of our Lenten Journey. At this stage many of us are becoming tired and begin to weaken. It is at times such as these that we need to strengthen our resolve.

The messages of The Son of God are reassuring.

The Lenten Journey 2022: A Layman's Perspective - 5

At this stage of this year's Lenten journey we tend to feel tired and tend to become spiritually lethargic, and perhaps even physically so. This is quite understandable, for we are but mere human beings, and the forces of darkness arrayed against are quite formidable.

We may even begin to feel that it is impossible for us to resist the power of the evil one, however, at Chapter 1 Verse 137 of The Holy Gospel of Jesus Christ According To St Luke we are reassured that with God nothing is impossible.

Therefore we all can, and should, take comfort in that assurance and continue on our journey full of confidence that, with prayer and fasting, we can restore our connection with our Heavenly Father, and once again enjoy the abundance of His Heavenly Grace.

It is at such times that we should pause every now and then, and reflect on that which was suffered by Jesus Christ, in fulfilment of His divine mission here on earth, He having been sent by The Father to fulfil His plan for our salvation.

God's love for us is unlimited, that is why He sent His Son to suffer and to die, in a most brutal manner, all for our sake. That is why, at Chapter 3 Verse 16 of The Holy Gospel of Jesus Christ According To St John, we are reminded: For God so loved the world, as to give his only begotten Son; that whosoever believeth in him, may not perish, but may have life everlasting.

Yes, oh yes, fellow travellers, let us continue on this year's Lenten Journey confident that God and His Son very much want us to complete it and regain our spiritual reconnection.

governor general, inform him that they no longer support the prime minister, and ask for a new appointment.

It seems as if that too is NOT going to happen.

The carib update commentator reminded us that Mr. Shawn Richards was the only member of the coalition who attended the swearing in ceremony of the prime minister for his second term in office. Perhaps we all failed to pay sufficient attention to that occurrence and what it foretold.

As the commentator pointed out, at the recently held PAM Annual Convention, the leader of PAM and the leader of The CCM, both of whom are members of the (so-called) unity coalition, before the whole world, openly put the prime minister on political trial and convicted him, even as he sat listening to them, his face partially hidden by a COVID mask.

As she opined, this weekends' PLP convention should prove to be an interesting one.

In a very recent address the deputy prime minister, Mr. Shawn Richards, apparently made a statement in which he agreed with Mr. Mark Brantley that Nevis is not getting its 'fair share' of CBI monies. Yes, indeed, this PLP convention could prove to be a very interesting one.

What is ever so sad, and most disheartening about all of this, is the fact the DISUNITY is happening at a time when our country is very badly in need of sound management. With the COVID pandemic still raging, with a world on the brink of chaos, and with global supply shortages looming, our country is desperately crying out for real leadership and 'good governance' (remember that 'promise'?!?).

Instead we are most insultingly treated to more prettiness and traffic lights. Indeed, some persons will say "prettiness can't done". Other will say "pretty lights for so!"

None of that will help us.

Our country is most desperately in need of the sound management which only Labour can provide. Our long and well established record is proof of that.

It is time for Dr. Harris and his lot to go! It is time for Dr Drew and his dedicated and loyal team.

Bus Drivers In Traffic Lights Drama: ‘We Asked About Bus Stop Changes Months Before’

By: Precious Mills

BASSETERRE, St. Kitts (Thursday 24th March 2022)-Bus drivers who operate from the College Street bus stop area in Basseterre are currently working with authorities to get their concerns addressed after the turning on of traffic lights-on Tuesday 22nd March 2022- left them upset and confused since no preparations were put in place by the Traffic Department for loading and offloading passengers, even though questions were asked “months” before.

Speaking with bus drivers on the morning of Thursday 24th March, this media house got an update that for the loading of passengers, they have been allowed to move closer to the original area of about 80 feet after for pass having a talk with officials the day before in the area. As understood, for them (the bus drivers), such is comfortable at this time as they await improvements in general which includes having a bus stop facility.

When initially asked to move at a further area beyond the traffic lights, safety, poor lighting, distance, traffic congestion as well as inconvenience for residents were some of the issues pointed at by the bus drivers who generally operate along the routes in the St. Peter’s and Shadwell communities as well as some parts in Basseterre along the way.

As gathered, officials from the Transport Board, Transport Minister Lindsay Grant and Traffic Department combined visited the area after the drivers created a public debate about the situation.

“Is all of us come together and decide...They (the officials) tried to assess and came and asked us what would be comfortable for us for the time being so we tell them we are too far up the road so even if we could come down a little more...Everything still ain’t official yet,” bus driver Lorenzo shared.

Vice President of the St.Peter’s Bus Association Devon Caines, during an interview with this reporter the day before (Wednesday), explained that questions have been put to local authorities “months” before the traffic lights were turned on.

“Yesterday, they (traffic police) came. We were forced to move up here, and as you can see no sort of preparations up here were made. You could say that we’re in the center of the road because there are vehicles parked. Right now we’re loading double parking which to me it ain’t make no sense because if you going to mark out de box and send us up here without a proper area, that ain’t good at all. They didn’t notify, no preparations were made. Yesterday they caught us off guard and we’re asking information like ‘When are you going to mark out this area? When de lights turn on way we going?’ We’ve been asking this for months.”

Here is what some other bus drivers had to say that day.

Bob- “The way they come yesterday, it wasn’t pleasing to us. They treat us like they think we are a set of animals; they ain’t got no respect for us. You know like when you have a bundle of sheep or goat in your garden and you go and run them out? That is how they treat us yesterday. It’s not good, and we’re very important in this place to the public so they have to come better than that. The police in particular, I will say, they don’t have any respect for busmen in this place and that’s a big concern that we have.”

Devon - Unruly Busman- “I have a question. All these years when they telling people vote for dey furture, if the bus stop wasn’t part ah dem future or we future when dey feel dey could do as dey like all over and now want put people way dey want? That’s a question ah want to ask dem: What kinda future we must vote for when tings ah happen when e want and how e want and nobody could do nothing and say nothing, and it wrong. Yeah, das all a got to say.”

Lorenzo- “We are not denying the fact that we have to move. We know that we’re supposed to move but they show up the afternoon and tell us we have to move. They didn’t mark out up above to say ‘This is gonna be you all new bus stop’. They didn’t notify residents that the bus stop is going to move. What we concern about, we come up by de step and come up by de alley no safety is in the ghaut. Yeah we need the bus stop, yeah we know it ain’t going come now but they shoulda do it the proper way

Police Find Different Date Details In Deadly Missing Man Matter

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETTERE, ST.KITTS (Thursday 24th March 2022)-Police investigation has led to updated information about the date when 40-year-old Mario Riley was last seen and the date when he was killed.

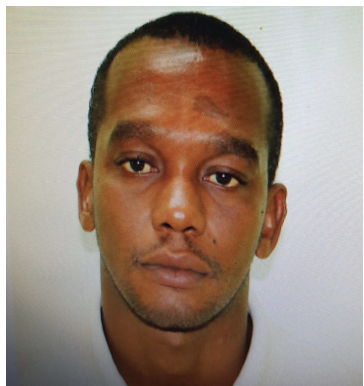

The Tabernacle resident was reported missing and found dead almost two weeks later, and to date police have charged someone for the crime.

A police statement issued on Wednesday 23rd March 2022 indicated that the death of Mario Riley was a homicide.

It was reported that on that day, 25-year-old Shakeem Thomas of Basseterre was charged with his murder.

Credible information reaching this media house indicates that the accused, who is currently in police custody, is the victim's half-brother from his father's side.

Police say the offence was committed on March 01. Initially, police reported that Riley was last seen on Thursday 3rd March wearing a black, plain t-shirt, long black pants and a pair of black and white sneakers.

In responding to a question posed by local media about the dates regarding the difference between the date when the police stated that Riley was last seen and the date of his death, a spokesperson at the Police Public Relations Department, had this to say: "I have been informed that when he was first reported missing, the Police began making enquiries. They had received some information that indicated that Riley was last seen on March 03, 2022. The investigation has since led to evidence which revealed otherwise."

Riley was reported missing on Sunday 6th March, and police reported some that his body was found on the evening of Friday 18th March, semi-clad along a dirt road leading to Beaumont Park in Dieppe Bay.

ST.KITTS-NEVIS BITCOIN NEWS RELEASE

Employees Get Paid in Bitcoin Cash Salaries - BCH Sees Widespread Adoption in Saint Kitts and Nevis, Sint Maarten, Antigua

ST.KITTS-NEVIS (MONDAY 21ST MARCH 2022)- During the last few years, Saint Kitts and Nevis, the dual-island nation in the Caribbean, has become a hotspot for bitcoin cash adoption and other islands like Antigua and Sint Maarten have also seen growing crypto acceptance. This week, a member of Sint Maarten’s Parliament requested to get his entire salary paid in bitcoin cash and while a large swathe of merchants in Saint Kitts and Nevis accept the crypto asset, it’s become so user-friendly employees have requested to have their payroll settled in bitcoin cash.

Bitcoin Cash Adoption Surges in Saint Kitts and Nevis, Sint Maarten, Antigua - Elected Sint Maarten Official Sparks Interest in BCH Payroll

On March 20, 2022, data stemming from the web portal map.bitcoin.com indicates that there are several hundred merchants throughout a number of Caribbean islands that accept bitcoin cash (BCH). Bitcoin cash is a peer-to-peer, decentralized digital currency that allows users to transact without a third party in a very inexpensive manner. Metrics from the website map.bitcoin.com show that large concentrations of BCH acceptance derive from islands like Antigua, Barbuda, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Sint Maarten, and a few other islands in the Caribbean.

For instance, Saint Kitts and Nevis has 129 bitcoin cash (BCH) accepting merchants with a population of just over 53,000 residents. BCH supporting establishments include Sharkies Souvenirs, Kings Mini Mart, The Perfume Shop, Glitter Jewelry, St Kitts Resort Wear, Dem Timez Bar, Grant & Powell Attorneys, Food Centre, Cocoplums Garden Bar & Grill, and dozens more.

Sint Maarten and the surrounding area have 123 BCH accepting businesses with a population of 41,000. BCH accepting merchants in the region include businesses like Rafi Barber Shop, Cabinet Physical Therapy, Nature Animal Hope Hill, Ours Private Chef, Oasis Food & Drinks, Beds Nâ€™ Beyond, Rickâ€™s, and Elite Travel Caribbean. Merchants from Saint Kitts and Nevis and Sint Maarten have discovered that the Bitcoin Cash network is a lightning-fast, secure, borderless peer-to-peer electronic cash system with low processing fees.

Presently, Antigua’s population of 99,300 residents has 69 merchants that accept bitcoin cash. Merchants on the island that accept BCH include establishments such as Skullduggery Cafe, Antigua Yacht Club Resort, 5 Senses, Clean Foodâ€™n Jooce, Creole Antigua Tours, Barefoot Antigua, Cool Cabana, Catherineâ€™s Cafe, Axxess Marine Antigua, and Sheer Rocks Restaurant.

Employees From a Myriad of Businesses Seek Bitcoin Cash Payroll Following Sint Maarten MPâ€™s Announcement

Angel investor and Bitcoin.comâ€™s founder Roger Ver resides in St. Kitts and the crypto investor and entrepreneur has promoted the use of peer-to-peer electronic cash in the country for years. On March 18, The St. Kitts-Nevis Times reported that Ver has been seeking approval for cryptocurrency automated teller machines (ATMs) on St. Kitts. The following day, Rolando Brison, the leader of the United Peopleâ€™s Party and member of Sint Maartenâ€™s Parliament announced he requested his entire salary to be paid in bitcoin cash.

MP Brison believes his country should embrace blockchain technology and cryptocurrency solutions. “By having my entire salary paid in bitcoin cash (BCH), I hope to signal my belief that it represents a viable additional means of commerce, transacting, and savings in St. Maarten,” Brison told the press on Saturday. “Bitcoin cash is already the most widely accepted cryptocurrency on the island and is increasingly accepted in the Kingdom, the region and the world,” the Sint Maarten MP added. Brison further said that he is exploring possibilities to legislate BCH and make it a national currency.

In a tweet published on March 19, Brison further said: “I can do all my groceries, pay rent, even make my car payments in BCH, its already widely accepted on the island so works for all citizens.”

On Sunday 19th March 2022, Sunny Gehani, a businessman from Saint Kitts and Nevis,7 and Sint Maarten, said that with bitcoin cash adoption becoming so widespread, employees from several businesses in Saint Kitts and Nevis want to be paid in bitcoin cash. Gehani mentioned employees looking to be paid in BCH stem from businesses like Square Duty Free, which has several locations in Saint Kitts and Nevis. Employees working for merchants such as the restaurant Asian Voyage, the designer jeweler RK Gems, the spa and salon Beauty Inside Out, and Frigate Bay’s Buddha Bar have requested to be paid in BCH as well.

“The number of merchants in Saint Kitts and Nevis accepting bitcoin cash is rising on a daily basis - At the same time, the rest of the Caribbean has been showing great interest as well,” Gehani added.

Interest in bitcoin cash has also spread, as BCH accepting merchants can be found in Montserrat, St. Barths, Guadeloupe, Anguilla, and Puerto Rico. Gehani remarked that he’s been in contact with business owners from these regions where bitcoin cash is trending. Moreover, Gehani concluded that merchants from India and United Arab Emirates (UAE) have also been showing interest in accepting bitcoin cash for goods and services.

Police Offer Lump Sum Reward In School Fire Matter

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETERRE, St.Kitts (Monday 21st March 2022)- A reward in the sum of EC$35,000 is being offered by the Royal St. Christopher and Nevis Police Force for information that leads to the arrest and successful prosecution of the person(s) responsible for the fire at the Joshua Obadiah

Williams Primary School in the Molineux community.

On Friday 18th March 2022, The St. Kitts and Nevis Fire and Rescue Services Department in Tabernacle responded to a report of a fire at the school just before 10 p.m. When the Fire Officers arrived at the school they met several classrooms engulfed in flames. The classrooms from kindergarten to grade five and their contents were completely destroyed.

A police statement disclosed that on Sunday 20th March, Commissioner of Police Hilroy Brandy visited the scene and expressed his disgust with the matter.

“My visit to the school left me in more shock and dismay than I could imagine. The images I saw before were disheartening, but actually seeing the school was even more difficult. Regardless of the motive, this malicious offence has adversely affected scores of our nation’s youths who deserve to learn in a comfortable environment. We are taking this matter very seriously and will need all the help we can get to solve the case,” Commissioner Brandy is reported to have said.

Anyone who may have information that can move this investigation forward is asked to call the Tabernacle Police Station by dialling 465-7227, their nearest Police Station or the crime hotline at 707 where information can be given anonymously.

Investigations into the matter are ongoing.

Taiwan Says 'Reunification Law' Would Put Too Much Pressure On China

TAIPEI (Reuters) - A senior Taiwanese official said on Thursday he did not see China adopting a "reunification law" as it would put too much pressure on Beijing to set a timetable for bringing the island under its control, which could severely raise tensions.

Illustration of China's and Taiwan's flags. Image credit: Dado Ruvic (Reuters).

China, which views democratically run Taiwan as its own territory, has not officially proposed such legislation, which would be a follow-up to a 2005 law giving Beijing the legal basis for military action if it judges Taiwan to have seceded or to be about to.

But it has been discussed in state media, and last week a spokesperson for China's Taiwan Affairs Office, asked about a suggestion from a political adviser for such a law, said they "carefully listen to and study opinions and suggestions".

Taiwan rejects China's sovereignty claims and says only its people can decide the island's future.

Taiwan's National Security Bureau Director-General Chen Ming-tong, taking questions from lawmakers in parliament, said a Chinese proposal for such legislation had generated a lot of discussion previously.

"It's equivalent to setting a timetable. In the past, during the Deng Xiaoping era, they tried to set a timetable, but in the end thought it best not to, as it would put pressure on them," Chen said, referring to the Chinese leader who died in 1997.

Chinese President Xi Jinping told a Taiwanese envoy in 2013 that a political solution to their standoff on sovereignty could not be postponed forever, though he has never set a timetable.

China has ramped up its military pressure against Taiwan over the last two years or so, and the Taiwan Strait that separates the two remains a potentially dangerous military flashpoint.

Chen, whose last job was head of Taiwan's China-policy-making Mainland Affairs Council, said he did not think China was gearing up for an attack this year, as Xi was getting ready for a key Communist Party congress at the end of the year to confirm him for a third term in office.

"He needs to maintain stability," Chen said.

Denzil Douglas in tribute to the late Madeleine Albright;

Says she was “a formidable defender of human rights”

BASSETTERRE, St Kitts, March 24, 2022 - Former St Kitts and Nevis Prime Minister, the Right Hon. Dr. Denzil L. Douglas, has paid tribute to former United States Secretary of State Madeleine Albright who passed away on Wednesday at the age of 84.

“I am deeply saddened to learn of the passing of Madeleine Albright. She was a pioneering leader in the USA public service.

As the first woman to ever become Secretary of State under President Bill Clinton, she also received the 2012 Presidential Medal of Freedom for her outstanding exploits as a renowned diplomat,” said Dr Douglas who met with Albright on many occasions.

Dr. Douglas, who served as Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs of St Kitts and Nevis, was among Caribbean leaders who met with US President Bill Clinton and Secretary Albright at the CARICOM-US Summit in Barbados in May 1998, at which the “Partnership for Prosperity and Security in the Caribbean” was signed.

At the inaugural annual meeting between the CARICOM Foreign Ministers and the US Secretary of State during a working breakfast session at the Waldorf in New York in October 1998, both sides reviewed the progress made since the Barbados Summit.

“Madam Secretary yielded a powerful influence across several decades. She help to shape US Foreign Policy using soft power and military force,” said Dr Douglas, who noted that while Ms. Albright carried a refined forthrightness with laudable feminine strength, “she will be forever be remembered for the distinguished role she played as a formidable defender of human rights.”

Dr Douglas, the Leader of the Opposition in the St Kitts and Nevis National Assembly said Ms Albright “promoted democracy, pushed post Cold War alliances in support of nuclear disarmament, and peered through a pragmatic multicultural lens, to engage the global community.”

He noted before her death, the Secretary of State chaired many organizations including the National Democratic Institute and Harry S. Truman Scholarship Foundation.

“Madeleine will be greatly missed by her friends and families, and all those public servants whose lives she touched and whom she mentored. May her soul rest in peace and rise in celestial glory,” Dr Douglas said.

Recycling waste: St. Kitts and Nevis stakeholders exposed to Taiwan’s technology

BASSETERRE, ST. KITTS, March 21, 2022 (MMS-SKN) — The Republic of China (Taiwan) has made significant strides in waste management, becoming a shining example of a country that has moved from recycling to circular economy and St. Kitts and Nevis is bracing itself to follow that example.

Project Steering Committee members of the recently launched St. Kitts and Nevis Solid Waste Management and Recycling Project were last week Thursday (March 17) apprised on Taiwan’s roadmap of its waste management from recycling to circular economy through an online seminar conducted by Professor Ming-Chien Su of the Department of National Resources and Environmental Studies at the National Dong Hwa University.

The prestigious National Dong Hwa University (NDHU) is a national research university located in Hualien, in Eastern Taiwan. Apart from environmental studies, it offers a wide range of disciplines, including the sciences, engineering, computer science, law, arts, design, humanities, social sciences, education sciences, marine science, music, and business.

The online seminar to share Taiwan’s experience of waste recycling management that was held at the Caribbean Confederation of Credit Unions’s conference room at the corner of Wilkin Street and St. Johnston Avenue in Fortlands, West Basseterre, was arranged and coordinated by Ms Joyce Chang, the local Project Coordinator.

The seminar was held in two sessions, and in the first one Professor Ming-Chien Su gave an outline of the evolution of Taiwan’s recycling system where she noted that 70% of waste in Taiwan is from industrial waste.

She talked of Taiwan’s waste recycling regulation and recycling management system, where she noted that garbage trucks are fitted with GPS tracking to prevent illegal dumping of garbage. She also explained how the country’s waste recycling fund operates.

In the second session, the Professor updated the participants on Taiwan’s current waste treatment and recycling status, and Taiwan’s waste recycling technology (paper, metal, plastic, glass, etc.). Participants were informed that Taiwan had banned the use of plastic bags and that shoppers were encouraged to carry their own bags, or they pay for one.

As defined in the Save Our Seas 2.0 Act, a circular economy is one that reduces material use, redesigns materials to be less resource intensive, and recaptures ‘waste’ as a resource to manufacture new materials and products.

The sessions were chaired by Ms Vicia Woods, Bio Safety Officer, Department of Environment, in the Federal Ministry of Environment and Cooperatives, who thanked Professor Su for sharing her expertise, her knowledge and her experience in the waste management and recycling project in Taiwan.

“We do trust that we have learnt today so that we can move forward with setting up a waste recycling management system of our own here in St. Kitts and Nevis,” observed Ms Woods. “It won’t happen overnight, but I definitely think from what we have learnt today we can take this and tailor it to our country’s specific needs. We can use her experiences and see how it can help us to reach the point that which Taiwan is today. Maybe it won’t be happening in the next two/three years, but we will definitely be on the way there.”

Ms Joyce Chang, Project Coordinator, St. Kitts and Nevis Solid Waste Management and Recycling Project, thanked those who took time to attend the online seminar as their intention was to learn and to understand what Taiwan is doing in its recycling programme.

“Learning from the Taiwan experience, I hope we can cooperate together and make St. Kitts and Nevis a better society through this recycling programme for the benefit of the next generation,” said Ms Chang. “I hope we can here in St. Kitts and Nevis follow the Taiwan example, and I want to do something and make Question: Why weren't women allowed to act in Shakespeare's plays? - Anastasia, Herdon, Virginia, 15.

The role of Desdemona, the devoted, loving wife murdered by her husband in 'Othello,' wasn't performed by a woman until 1660 - about six decades after Shakespeare wrote the play. This is because when Shakespeare was writing for the early modern stage, young men and boys performed all the women's parts.

Numerous English theatergoers considered seeing women on the public stage for the first time a pivotal moment, including the civil servant and diarist Samuel Pepys. It was just one month after the first female actress played Desdemona that Pepys recorded "the first time that ever saw Women come upon the stage."

King Charles subsequently issued a royal proclamation to make it official: "Wee doe - permit and give leave That all the woemens part to be acted in either of the said two Companies for the time to come maie be performed by woemen."

A puzzling situation

I have thought a lot about why men performed women's roles because I research how pregnancy was represented on the early modern English stage during this period of all-male casts. The restriction has long puzzled scholars, mostly because no clear legal statute prohibited it, and women acted professionally in other countries during this period.

Also, women could perform in other venues, such as masques, where dance, music and spectacles were enjoyed by aristocrats in England during the 16th and 17th centuries, and country house entertainments - short plays that were staged for the queen and performed at country estates.

It's possible that women were allowed to perform in these settings because they were more private and associated with an elevated class status. There was something inappropriate, however, about women professionally acting on the public stage.

These restrictions on women may be related to some of the negative views of acting in general, summarized in Puritan writer William Prynne's declaration that "popular stage-plays are sinfull, heathenish, lewde, ungodly spectacles, and most pernicious corruptions."

According to many anti-theatricalists, plays were "sinfull" because they promoted pleasure and encouraged people to watch an "ungodly spectacle" rather than working or attending church. For women in particular, it was generally deemed indecent to participate in and make money from such public performances.

Others commented on the difference between English theater and the theater in continental Europe, where women did act professionally. The writer Thomas Nashe wrote: "Our Players are not as the players beyond sea, a sort of squirting baudie Comedians."

Even though many writers condemned the practice of men's wearing female attire on stage, to them it was still preferable to having women become public spectacles on the professional stage.

Although women weren't on stage during Shakespeare's lifetime, they were involved with theatrical productions in other ways. For example, they made and altered costumes, collected admissions fees, sold food and other goods used in the theater, and even owned playing houses.

Now women can play men

Since Charles' declaration that women's parts "maie be performed by woemen," women have played an increasingly diverse role in Shakespearean theater - including playing lead male roles.

In 1899 Sarah Bernhardt performed as Hamlet. More recently Jessika D Williams played the lead in "Othello."

These gender reversals are a reminder that much has changed since men and boys played all the women's parts, and that much more will continue to change as society grapples with questions about gender, identity and performance.

Excess Weight In Midlife Means A Sicker Old Age - Study Findings -

By Amy Norton

Here's a compelling reason to shed those extra pounds: A new study finds that middle-aged people who are obese, or even simply overweight, may face more health problems down the road.

The study, of nearly 30,000 men and women, found that the more people weighed around age 40, the greater their odds of chronic health conditions after age 65. And obesity, particularly severe levels, ultimately cut people's lives short by five years, on average, compared to those who were in the normal-weight range.

"There are serious health consequences to obesity that should not be ignored," said lead researcher Dr Sadiya Khan. She is an assistant professor at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine, in Chicago.

Class III obesity, once known as "morbid obesity," refers to a body mass index (BMI) of 40 or more. "These patients are at least 100 pounds overweight, and often have conditions like high blood pressure and type 2 diabetes," said Dr Vance Albaugh, a bariatric surgeon and researcher at Pennington Biomedical Research Center, in Baton Rouge, LA.

Those people, Albaugh said, frequently need help beyond lifestyle changes - including medication or some type of weight-loss surgery. Those procedures alter the digestive tract to limit the amount of food a person can eat and the absorption of calories from food.

But this study shows that while class III obesity in middle age might be the biggest health threat, it is not the only one, Albaugh said.

The findings show a gradient: Middle-aged people who were overweight fared a little worse in older age than those who were normal-weight, and those with mild obesity did a little worse still.

"That's not surprising," said Albaugh, who was not involved in the research. But it underscores the potential benefits of healthy lifestyle changes for people with the common middle-age spread, he said.

"This suggests you can benefit from losing a small amount of weight, or just stopping yourself from moving into the 'obese' category," Dr Albaugh added.

That's not to say weight loss - or, more to the point, maintaining weight loss - is easy. The human body is more wired toward gaining weight than losing it, Albaugh said. So when calories are more scarce, the body responds by expending fewer of them.

On top of that, people generally gain weight as they get older, Albaugh noted. It all means that a middle-aged person trying to shed pounds may be fighting an uphill battle.

The good news, though, is that it's not all about the number on the scale, Albaugh said. People can still reap health benefits from eating well and exercising, even if the scale shows little change.

The new findings, published 15 March 2022 online in JAMA Network Open, are based on almost 30,000 Chicago-area adults who were followed for over 40 years. At the outset, they were 40 years of age, on average.

Overall, those who were overweight had a similar life expectancy as their counterparts with a normal BMI. But obesity took about two to five years from people's lives. People who were normal-weight died at age 82, on average, versus age 77 among those with class III obesity in middle-age.

But when it came to chronic health conditions, even overweight people were worse off. Compared with their normal-weight counterparts, they typically spent an extra year of their lives with conditions like heart disease, diabetes or stroke. That increased to two to three years among people who were moderately obese (class I or II) in middle-age.

Khan stressed that "it's never too early or too late" to make lifestyle changes for the better.

But she also said the burden should not be on individuals alone - especially people with low incomes who struggle to simply pay the rent. Khan said they need the help of policies that, for example, make healthy "whole" foods more accessible and provide "green spaces" for exercise.

Albaugh also suggested that people start with small changes that are achievable and, most importantly, sustainable. That could mean replacing sugary drinks with water, using the stairs instead of the elevator, or taking a daily walk around the neighborhood.

CBI. SIDF AND TRAFFIC LIGHTS

By: EQUITABLE SHARE FOR ALL

When Dr Denzil Douglas was the prime minister, every single day on every single talk show and opposition platform, the chorus from those who now sit in government headquarters was for the general public to know everything about the SIDF and the CBI programme.

They wanted to know the number of passports being sold because they were being sold like black pudding on a Saturday afternoon. They wanted to know how much money was in the SIDF because Douglas was using this money as a slush fund. The complaints were endless.

Now to hear Shawn, deputy prime minister and loyal servant to the prime minister say that he doesn't know how much money is in either fund is as laughable as it is sad. 2015. 2016. 2017. 2018. 2019. 2020. 2021. 2022. All these years, not one of you in the Cabinet of ministers knew how many passports have been sold and are being sold. All these years not one of you knew and still don't know how much money was and is in these funds. What do they know, I wonder.

If for all these years Timothy never felt it necessary to tell the Cabinet how much money was there, why should Shawn believe that Timothy will tell them now? Obviously, Shawn knows something that the rest of us are not privy to. So I will wait for us to be told how much money is in the funds and I will wait for Nevis to get its fair share of the CBI and SIDF money to spend as they please. I will also wait to see what happens next WHEN, sorry, I mean IF, Timothy does not study with Shawn.

Symptomatic of the dis functionality of the government is the erection and commissioning of the traffic lights. Since early 2020, erection of the traffic lights began. Traffic lights were going up in so many intersections in downtown Basseterre that some of us wondered if there had been a going out of business sale on traffic lights somewhere.

So the lights went up with absolutely no conversation nor consultation with the people who would be most impacted. I don't believe that any forward thinking person is opposed to traffic lights. But if someone has lived and has parked their vehicle on a road for more than fifty years, couldn't the authorities have extended a little common courtesy to them and met with them just to show that they care?

At the end of the day, if the government wants to put up traffic lights nobody can stop them. As if evident, the traffic lights are up. But how can it make sense for the government to put traffic lights all over the place only to realize that to turn on some of the lights will create more problems than it will solve?

And that is why it took more than two years, twenty four months, to turn on the traffic lights. And when the authorities realized that if they waited to turn on all of the lights it might take another two years, they simply painted all of town yellow making it virtually illegal to park in all of town and turned on what lights they could.

At Bird Rock, the lights are up but they are not on. And it seems as if because the authorities were not able to bully the businesses most likely to be most negatively impacted by the traffic lights on the KFC highway into submission, everybody is being punished.

The roads at that intersection need to be marked out. It seems as if they are so embarrassed because the lights are not yet on, they are ignoring everything else. After spending so much money making it into the KFC highway, the least the government can do is mark out the lanes and erect STOP signs appropriately. While "traffic lights saves lives", every effort still has to be made to save lives even when the traffic lights are up but not on.

Which brings me back to the point about common courtesy. Conversations. Consultations. Respect. But if the government ministers and parties don't have respect for each other, why should I expect them to have any for us?

England in West Indies: Jack Leach and Saqib Mahmood spare tourists' top order

By Matthew Henry

BBC Sport - From the section Cricket

Saqib Mahmood and Jack Leach

Mahmood and Leach batted together for 36.2 overs

Third Test, St George's, Grenada (day one):

England 204 Mahmood 49, Leach 41*; Seales 3-40, Mayers 2-13

West Indies Yet to bat

Jack Leach and Saqib Mahmood were England's unlikely saviours after the tourists' top order collapsed on day one of the decisive third Test against West Indies.

Having been asked to bat first on a lively pitch, England crumbled to 114-9 before Leach and Mahmood shared a crucial last-wicket partnership of 90 in Grenada.

Mahmood was bowled in the final over of the day for 49, his highest score in professional cricket, but not before he and Leach had dragged England to 204.

That represents an admirable recovery from England, who were facing being dismissed below 100 when they fell from 23-0 to 90-8 earlier in the day.

Captain Joe Root was caught behind for a duck in the morning session while three wickets fell for no runs in an abject spell after lunch - England unable to deal with the movement found by West Indies' pace attack.

But as the ball softened and pitch flattened out, Leach, who finished 41 not out, stoutly stopped the procession of wickets before he and Mahmood added valuable runs, including one fine Mahmood six.

They ensured England's bid to earn a first series win in the Caribbean since 2004, which would also halt their eight-match winless run in Tests, was not all but over on the opening day.

Unlikely fightback rescues England

Not since 1885 have numbers 10 and 11 top scored in a men's Test. Their effort was remarkable.

When Mahmood and Leach came together six of the top seven had made single-figure scores while the highest partnership in the innings was the ninth-wicket stand of 24 between Leach and Chris Woakes, who made an important 25 before becoming the third batter to be clean bowled.

Batting became much easier as the seam movement of earlier lessened, but that should not take away from Leach and Mahmood's performance.

At first it was all about survival, Leach digging in as he had famously against Australia during Ben Stokes' Ashes miracle in 2019, but as the partnership grew so did the attacking intent.

Leach drove the seamers down the ground and Mahmood, playing just his second Test, flicked seamer Kyle Mayers, whose day began by dismissing Root and Zak Crawley, over the mid-wicket rope.

With four balls to go, Mahmood cracked Jermaine Blackwood down the ground to the boundary. That took him beyond his previous professional best score of 45.

A ball later, with a maiden top-level fifty a run away, Mahmood tried to work the off-spinner into the leg side for a single but played on to his stumps.

He had to drag himself from the field but he left with his team-mates on their feet, applauding from the balcony.

Top order collapses as ball seams

Chris Woakes was the ninth batter to fall at which point England were 114-9

The two drawn Tests in this series have been played on flat batting tracks, England showing positive signs in two draws.

Despite the Leach-Mahmood stand, the fact England's batters failed at the first sign of seam movement is of significant concern.

In the first session Crawley hit a loose drive to extra cover for seven, Root nicked behind and Dan Lawrence was trapped in front by Jayden Seales - the first of three wickets for the impressive seamer.

Trundling seam-bowling all-rounder Mayers took two wickets for no runs in his first five-over spell, justifying his selection over spinner Veerasammy Permaul.

England played and missed throughout the first two hours and, in truth, could easily have been further in the mire.

After lunch the tourists slumped further when Ben Stokes miscued a pull back to bowler Alzarri Joseph for two, Jonny Bairstow nicked behind to wicketkeeper Joshua da Silva for a duck and opener Alex Lees, who had survived 96 balls for 31, fell in the same fashion to Kemar Roach.

All three wickets fell with the score on 53. When Foakes was bowled by Seales from a ball that nipped back, numbers two to seven in England's batting line-up had all been dismissed for single-figure scores for the first time since 1951.

This series is being billed as the start of England's "red-ball reset". The period before Leach and Mahmood's stand was all too familiar. They are fortunate it was not terminal for their hopes.

Sugar Boyz Getting Acclimatized to Andorran Climate

It's cold in Andorra but the Sugar Boys are gradually getting acclimatized to the conditions in this European country in the lead up to their international friendly against the host nation on Friday March 25th. Coach Austin Huggins, speaking from Andorra, said they had their first training session on Tuesday. "Oh my God; its freezing," Huggins said chuckling. "But things are going very well. The guys are in good spirits. We went out training today and the guys are in a very positive frame of mind; looking forward for this very important friendly," the coach added. He said this will hopefully be a good test for the team.

Coach Huggins expects that the players will be acclimatized to the conditions in Andorra by Friday. "I think (the climate) may affect their performance but today we had to reinforce that it is important for them to be strong minded and the importance for them to be mentally tough," Huggins said. "Today was a test and they did fairly good so hopefully by tomorrow and then Thursday they would be more acclimatized and by Friday we take the bull by the horn."

Meanwhile, team manager Jamir Claxton said all has gone well so far from an administrative stand point. "From travel to arriving in Andorra and settling in our accommodation," Claxton said. "Accommodation (has been) top class; the players are comfortable; the food has been good. In terms of taking care of their administrative stuff related to the game; we've been helped a lot by the Andorran Association so everything is going great," he disclosed. The match between St. Kitts and Nevis and Andorra will be streamed live on the SKNFA Facebook page at 3:45pm Eastern Caribbean time.
