Rebuilding Confidence In Health Care

One of the key indicators that a country is doing well is often reflected in the healthcare sector.

The truth of the matter is that under the previous administration, the challenges demolished people's confidence in the delivery of health care services, and sadly such has been the topic on social media, radio airwaves and word on the street.

And of course, that subject about the stem cell scandal and the firing of the Chief Medical Officer who tried to speak out did not help either.

It is a good thing, and some would even call it a blessing that Prime Minister Dr. Terrance Drew, who is the Minister of Health is a trained medical doctor and a specialist in internal medicine at that, leading the charge in handling the affairs of the country as he currently works towards improving the quality of health care services at the Joseph N. France General Hospital and building confidence in the healthcare sector overall.

Persons can now breathe a sigh of relief in the comfort of knowing that the delivery of proper health care is a priority for the new administration. Speaking of breathing, the government is seeking to bring in a lung doctor called a pulmonologist.

Increased number of doctors, looking after the well-being of nurses, best of the best medical equipment, more and new specialists as well as improvements at the Pogson Hospital in Sandy Point are just some of the areas which point to what has been happening and will be happening.

Many individuals over the years have given testimonies and shared stories about the challenges of the healthcare system. Even having to visit the 'Monkey Farm' to use an MRI machine that monkeys use has not been sitting well with our citizens and residents, but it was what has been available and so individuals just had to make do.

But a light is at the end of the tunnel. A state-of-the-art MRI has been ordered and will soon be on island at the JNF General Hospital and so making do in an atmosphere shared with primates- will soon be transformed into a healthcare setting for only humans.

Proper health care should always be a priority, and no government should be monkeying around with ensuring that the right equipment, resources and policies are in place to give all patients and their loved ones' confidence knowing that they will be properly cared for with capability and efficiency.

Government- provided medical funding being available for the critically-ill babies and young children is another step in the right direction in assisting the families who are unable financially to do so. Talk about peace of mind for those parents and guardians in knowing that money is no object in giving their little ones a chance for the required life-saving surgeries.

It is certainly good news to know that the government of the day is not just putting a bandage on the wound of what the healthcare system has been, but rather is paying keen attention to properly diagnose and treat the situation for sustainable betterment and caring recovery.

PM Drew Talks About Improving Service At JNF

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETTERRE, St.Kitts (Thursday 16th March 2023)- “So even before we move to the new hospital, we have to make sure that our hospital presently can deliver quality service.”

This was what Prime Minister and Minister of Health Dr. Terrance Drew said while giving an update on what the government has been doing in regard to improving service at the Joseph N. France General Hospital, during his appearance on Freedom FM’s ‘Issues’ programme aired live on Wednesday 15th March 2023.

New medical equipment, new specialist doctors, EMS training and transportation for nurses were among the areas covered during his presentation.

Talking about what has been happening at JNF General Hospital, he shared that the number of doctors has increased at the emergency room and also that there is system “in place where you can meet a nurse as soon as you reach in the emergency room and cut down the wait time, and that again we are implementing, and that again had never been done in that type of systematic way where you actually have a triage nurse...”

Dr. Drew highlighted that there was a recent orientation for workers at the Emergency Medical Services (EMS) and that training is slated to begin in April this year.

“[there was] an initial meeting... and now gearing up to have full fledged training of the EMS so there certification here, it can be applied to anywhere else across the region...”

Addressing caring for the well-being of nurses in the federation, he outlined recent legislation passed which would now see that nurses can register once every two years instead of yearly.

Transportation issue of getting nurses home after working late night shifts, he pointed out, would be resolved permanently between this week and next week.

Dr. Drew informed that the government has bought an MRI machine which is being built and will be transported this year and to be installed as well.

He said presently some surgeries at the eye clinic cannot be done because there was no sanner and also the microscope was not available as it was old and crashed.

“Scanner is here and the second thing we will be getting is the microscope which has already been shipped and should arrive by Thursday and we’re hoping to resume eye surgery very soon. There are people who are blind or losing their eyesight because these surgeries are not taking place. We are bringing in these equipment; we try to get the best that is there to offer. They cost hundreds of thousands of dollars but the people deserve it and that is why we decided to go and buy.”

Dr. Drew said eye surgeries will be started “very very soon.”

The Health Minister expressed delight in the number of significant health investments thus far by the government.

“We have made a number of significant investments in health and I am happy with where we are going. There are going to be changes, and people must expect that there are going to be changes. However, with the changes we are saying there must be buy-in from all the staff....because we cannot continue. We know how we met health, we know what the situations were and these changes will become part of the culture of health care delivery here in St.Kitts and Nevis but apart from the training, we’re also having more specialists coming in.”

Additionally, he spoke about expecting a “visiting surgeon who would help us to step up with our surgical department” and that a neurologist doctor who deals with headaches, strokes and so forth is also expected whilst noting that “and because of the high cases we have here, we need a specialist with that.”

Also expected are “Two more internal medicine doctors to deal with other types of things so that we are properly better fully covered.”

Dr. Drew disclosed that the government is seeking to a biotechnician (lab technician) “to deal with our equipment but the other thing that we’re dealing with is seeking to get a pulmonologist which is a lung doctor because of the high cases of asthma and so forth ....people here with asthma, many of them would have never done a lung study and so we really want to attack that. So in short order we’ll have about four more specialists on the ground who would add to the pool and increase inter-services and increase of course improve the quality of service, and so we’ll be looking at a significant improvement when it comes to that.”

About the government’s plans to build a new hospital, Dr. Drew commented “we have to build, it is not a choice, and when we say smart hospital we’re talking about climate smart.”

He went on to say: “Because of climate change, buildings are going to deteriorate faster than expected because of the increase in temperature and other changes that that would bring and the hospital will deteriorate quicker than expected, and we have to have a hospital that really can withstand the acute and insidious changes of climate and that is why we have no choice but to build a hospital that can withstand it.”

Dr. Drew added: “If anything happens in St.Kitts and Nevis, one of the things that people can expect you to still be functioning is a hospital and we cannot take any chances with that, and that is why we’re going to invest $50 to $60 million US dollars to build the hospital. I showed a possible site that we’re already looking at because we’re going to have soil testing and all of that within this first term for sure. That is high priority and we’re moving along quickly to ensure that we have that hospital. So we’re looking at increased and improved services.”

As understood from the Health Minister, the new hospital will be put on a pathway to be accredited.

“We’re going to put the hospital on the pathway of accreditation....we need an accredited hospital. Many of the issues that have been plaguing health, it partly-from my own judgement having been in health care for many years now at different levels is that if you don’t have what is called a quality improvement process, things deteriorate, things don’t change and everybody becomes frustrated. That accreditation process we make sure that we are on a pathway of what we call consistent quality improvement processes and we are on the pathway to that.”

Dr. Drew said a consultant is going to come in next month “who is going to put us on that pathway.”

Speaking about the new hospital, the Health Minister remarked: “People must know that I’m serious about it and I’m not going to stop until it is delivered.”

Basseterre, St. Kitts (16 March 2023) - St. Kitts welcomes interCaribbean Airways' service to and from Barbados. The new airlift options increase accessibility to St. Kitts more than ever before, opening the door to convenient, same-day connectivity from Barbados and surrounding Caribbean islands.

"This additional airlift promotes intra-regional travel just in time for our "Summer of Fun" events. With a warm and welcoming local population, magnificent cuisine, and authentic Caribbean culture, St. Kitts awaits," said Minister of Tourism, the Honourable Marsha T. Henderson. "Visitation from around the Caribbean is a crucial part of our economic recovery and growth, and this additional lift will re-energize intraregional travel."

The Authority recently hosted a welcome ceremony for the inaugural flight of interCaribbean Airways to St. Kitts, which highlighted the twin-island destination being added addition to the airline's network.

In addition, SKTA, in conjunction with interCaribbean Airways, and Barbados Tourism Marketing Inc hosted a promotional event at the Hilton Barbados Resort which provided a great opportunity to promote and market the twin-island Federation to local travel advisors, tour operators, and media, which heavily focused on the destination's upcoming "Summer of Fun" events.

"The interCaribbean Airways new flights will allow this spring and summer to be an amazing travel option for our Caribbean neighbours," said Ellison "Tommy" Thompson, CEO of the St.

Bath Village Fisher Huggins named patron for first Agri-Expo 2023

NIA CHARLESTOWN NEVIS (March 14, 2023) — As the Department of Agriculture continues to prepare for the upcoming premier of Agri-Expo, on March 30 to 31, 2023, Mr. Collin Huggins of Bath Village, who is involved in both fishing and farming has been selected to be the patron of the event, for what the department says is his sterling contribution to the fishing industry on Nevis.

According to his profile, Mr. Huggins has been involved in both fishing and livestock farming from an early age. He describes being in the agriculture field as his livelihood, and recalls at the age of 28 promising himself never to work for anyone again. A vow he has kept and which continues to be the guiding light of his career, coupled with unforeseen twists of fate and hard work.

After leaving school, Mr. Huggins joined the Royal St. Christopher and Nevis Police Force but after three years he realized it was not where his heart was. Instead, his love for fishing ultimately took over and hence he began his 42-year career.

His early involvement in fishing began with pulling traps for his father who was a fisher and also a farmer. When his dad became ill, Mr. Huggins took on the brunt of the responsibility and to this day continues to make significant contributions to the agriculture sector on Nevis as both a supplier of land and of the sea.

Mr. Huggins credits Mr. Berkley Dore for the valuable lessons he instilled in him, experiences which he says have expanded his skillset, which led him to ultimately becoming better in his commercial fishing practice over the years.

However, the Agri-Expo 2023 patron in his advice for younger persons interested in fishing is a strong one - "If you aren't devoted and determined to be a fisher, do not go out to sea."

In response to what has been his fondest memory, he recalled the day he caught a strange fish with which he nor his counterparts were familiar and the Fishing List contained no information about his catch and no one knew what type of fish it was.

"Maybe it was a mermaid," he chuckled.

Mr. Huggins took the opportunity to point to some of the daily challenges with fishing including insufficient attention given to the wants and needs of the fishing community; and the scuba divers' tendency to shoot fish in breeding grounds.

Notwithstanding, Mr. Huggins loves his job, his family and children. He acknowledges that his involvement in the agricultural sector has played a major role in his growth and to this day continues to play a pivotal role in his life.

MOFA welcomes visit by St. Lucia Foreign Minister Baptiste

Publication Date: March 13, 2023 | A-A+

Vice Foreign Minister Alexander Tah-ray Yui (right) welcomes St. Lucia Foreign Minister Alva R. Baptiste March 13 at Taiwan Taoyuan International Airport. (MOFA)

The delegation led by St. Lucia Foreign Minister Alva R. Baptiste to Taiwan is sincerely welcomed by the government and people, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs said.

Arriving March 13 at the invitation of MOFA, the group also comprises Minister of Youth Development and Sports Kenson J. Casimir and Sen. Lisa C. Jawahir.

During its five-day stay, the group will meet with President Tsai Ing-wen and Foreign Minister Jaushieh Joseph Wu. They will additionally attend a banquet hosted by Wu and call on the Civil Aeronautics Administration and Taiwan External Trade Development Council (TAITRA).

The delegates are scheduled to visit the Chinese Taipei Table Tennis Association and APEX Flight Academy, as well as tour key cultural and tourist sites such as National Taiwan Museum, Songshan Cultural and Creative Park and Sun Moon Lake National Scenic Area.

According to the MOFA, since the two countries re-established official ties in 2007, bilateral collaboration has been progressing apace in areas spanning agriculture, climate resilience, education, information and communications technology, medical care, sustainable development, tourism and women's empowerment.

The Caribbean ally is a long-term supporter of Taiwan's global participation, the MOFA said, citing letters Baptiste sent to the World Health Organization, International Civil Aviation Organization and Interpol in 2022 to call for Taiwan's inclusion.

During the U.N. Framework Convention on Climate Change's 27th Conference of the Parties, Baptiste also urged that Taiwan not be left out of global cooperation, the ministry added. (SFC-E)

Nevis Officials Implore Water Conservation Amid Dry Season

Mr. Denzil Stanley, Acting Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Works and Water Services in the Nevis Island Administration

NIA CHARLESTOWN NEVIS (March 16, 2023)- Consumers on Nevis are being urged to manage their water consumption and make every effort to conserve the resource as the island's water supply is already being impacted by the prevailing dry season.

Mr. Denzil Stanley, Acting Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Works and Water Services, says it is critically important that all residents on the island refrain from wasting water. He said Nevis, like the other territories in the region, is already experiencing the effects of reduced rainfall associated with the dry season, resulting in supply wells and other sources running low.

"I'd like to admonish the Nevisian public to be prudent in the use of water. It's a valuable resource but it's not an infinite resource. So now into the dry season we are asking you to be wise with your use of water, and not to waste it," he said.

The Water official commended the Nevis Island Administration (NIA) for taking the necessary steps and making significant investment to increase the water storage capacity on the island, noting that "every bit of water that we can have in storage is a plus for us".

Mr. Stanley advised that it has become necessary for the Water Department to implement a water rationing schedule for some parts of the island. Effective March 15, Spring Hill, Fountain, Westbury, Jones Estate, Mount Lily, Rawlins, Upper Hamilton, Upper Morning Star, Beach Road, Upper Church Ground will be affected by the water management schedule between the hours of 9 pm to 5 am.

Speaking at a ceremony to commission a new 250,000 gallon water storage tank at Zetlands on March 13, 2023, Minister with responsibility for Water Services, Hon. Spencer Brand also issued an urgent appeal for persons to conserve water. He further informed of the NIA's intention to continue to explore for new sources of water in the short to medium term.

World Employment and Social Outlook: Ensure decent work for key workers, says ILO

(MEDIA)

© KB Mpofu / ILO

Press release | 15 March 2023

GENEVA (ILO News) - Countries need to improve the working conditions and earnings of key workers - who were essential during the COVID-19 crisis - to fully reflect their contribution to society and their importance in the daily functioning of economies, a new report from the International Labour Organization (ILO) says.

The report, World Employment and Social Outlook 2023: The value of essential work, underscores the extent to which economies and societies depend on key workers, and also how they are undervalued. The poor working conditions of key workers exacerbate employee turnover and labour shortages, jeopardizing the provision of basic services. Improvements in working conditions and greater investment in food systems, health care and other key sectors are necessary for building economic and social resilience to shocks, the report says.

Key workers can be found in eight main occupational groups covering health, food systems, retail, security, cleaning and sanitation, transport, manual, and technical and clerical occupations.

In the 90 countries where data was available, 52 per cent of all employment is done by key workers, although in high-income countries, where economic activities are more diversified, the share is lower (34 per cent).

During the COVID-19 crisis key workers suffered higher mortality rates than non-key workers, overall. Among different categories of key workers mortality rates varied; for example, in countries with available data, transport workers had higher mortality rates than health workers. The findings reveal the importance of occupational safety and health (OSH) protection, as well as the greater security associated with working in formal workplaces, with collective representation.

Lower wages, longer hours, and other deficits in working conditions

Across the world 29 per cent of key workers are low paid (where low paid is defined as pay that is less than two-thirds of the hourly median wage). On average, key workers earn 26 per cent less than other employees, with only two-thirds of this gap being accounted for by education and experience. In food systems, the share of low paid key employees is particularly high, at 47 per cent, and in cleaning and sanitation it is 31 per cent.

These sectors employ a large share of migrants, especially in high-income countries.

Nearly one-in-three key workers is on a temporary contract, although there are considerable country and sectoral differences. In the food industry 46 per cent are in temporary work. One-in-three employees in manual occupations and in cleaning and sanitation, are on temporary contracts.

Cleaning and security work is commonly outsourced, and other key occupations are routinely staffed with agency workers. This is particularly the case in warehousing and increasingly so in healthcare.

More than 46 per cent of key employees in low-income countries work long hours. Long working hours are more common in transport, where nearly 42 per cent of key workers across the globe work more than 48 hours a week. A substantial share of key workers around the world also have irregular schedules or short hours.

Nearly 60 per cent of key workers in low- and middle-income countries lack some form of social protection. In low-income countries social protection is minimal, only reaching 17 per cent of key workers. The picture is even bleaker for self-employed key workers in most developing countries, as they are almost entirely without social protection.

Ensuring decent work

“Healthcare workers, supermarket cashiers, delivery workers, postal workers, seafarers, cleaners, and others supplying food and necessities continued to perform their jobs, day in and day out, even at the height of the pandemic, often at great personal risk,” said ILO Director-General, Gilbert F. Hounbo. “Valuing key workers means ensuring that they receive adequate pay and work in good conditions. Decent work is an objective for all workers but it is particularly critical for key workers, who provide vital necessities and services both in good times and bad.”

To ensure the continuity of essential services during future pandemics or other shocks such as natural disasters, the report recommends greater investment in the physical infrastructure, productive capacity and human resources of key sectors. Under-investment, especially in health and food systems, contributes to decent work deficits that undermine both social justice and economic resilience. Among other recommendations, the report calls for:

- * Ensuring that Occupational Health and Safety (OSH) systems cover all branches of economic activity and all workers, with clear duties and rights specified, through collaboration between government, workers’ and employers’ representatives.
- * Improving pay to compensate for key worker undervaluation and to reduce the wage gap between key and non-key employees, including through negotiated or statutory minimum wages.
- * Guaranteeing safe and predictable working hours through regulation, including collective bargaining.
- * Adapting legal frameworks so that all workers, regardless of their employment status and contractual arrangements, are covered by social protection, especially paid sick leave.
- * Increasing access to training so that key workers can carry out their work effectively and safely.

The report outlines a framework that countries can use, as part of a process of social dialogue, to identify gaps in decent work and economic resilience in respect of their key workers and essential services and to develop a national strategy to address these through strengthened policies and investment.

Stinky seaweed bloom wider than US heads for Florida

IMAGE SOURCE,GETTY IMAGES - Seaweed clean up in Mexico

By Chloe Kim - BBC News, New York

Florida beaches may soon be overrun by massive patches of foul-smelling seaweed. It is the Atlantic sargassum belt, and while not new, it has been growing bigger than ever.

This year’s belt is about 5,500 miles long and weighs 10 million tons. It travels throughout the year, from West Africa to the Gulf of Mexico. This summer, it is expected to stink up beaches all over the Sunshine state.

Key West, Florida, is already seeing early amounts of the seaweed. Beach-goers can expect larger sargassum flows to come ashore more often, experts say.

“Pretty much every year we’re seeing a bloom that’s unlike anything we’ve ever seen before, because it’s just getting bigger and bigger,” University of South Florida’s Dr Brian Barnes told BBC News.

Sargassum is a “brown macroalgae floating on the ocean surface”, according to the University of South Florida Optical Oceanography Laboratory.

Though the sargassum is one bloom, responding to the same forces - it is not one “contagious mass,” Dr Barnes explains.

The smallest amount of a sargassum patch might be the size of a football field, but larger ones can reach up to a square mile (2.5 sq km).

In the North Atlantic, sargassum is a an important habitat for marine life, but after 48 hours on shore the seaweed starts to emit toxins like hydrogen sulphide which, in low amounts, smells like rotten eggs.

Environmentally speaking, the sargassum “can smother sea turtle nests on the beach” and release “plumes of dissolved organic matter, which can impact near shore environments and their inhabitants” Dr Barnes said.

Worse than the smell, though, hydrogen sulphide can cause headaches, eye irritation and upset stomach depending on the amount, according to the Centers of Disease Control and Prevention.

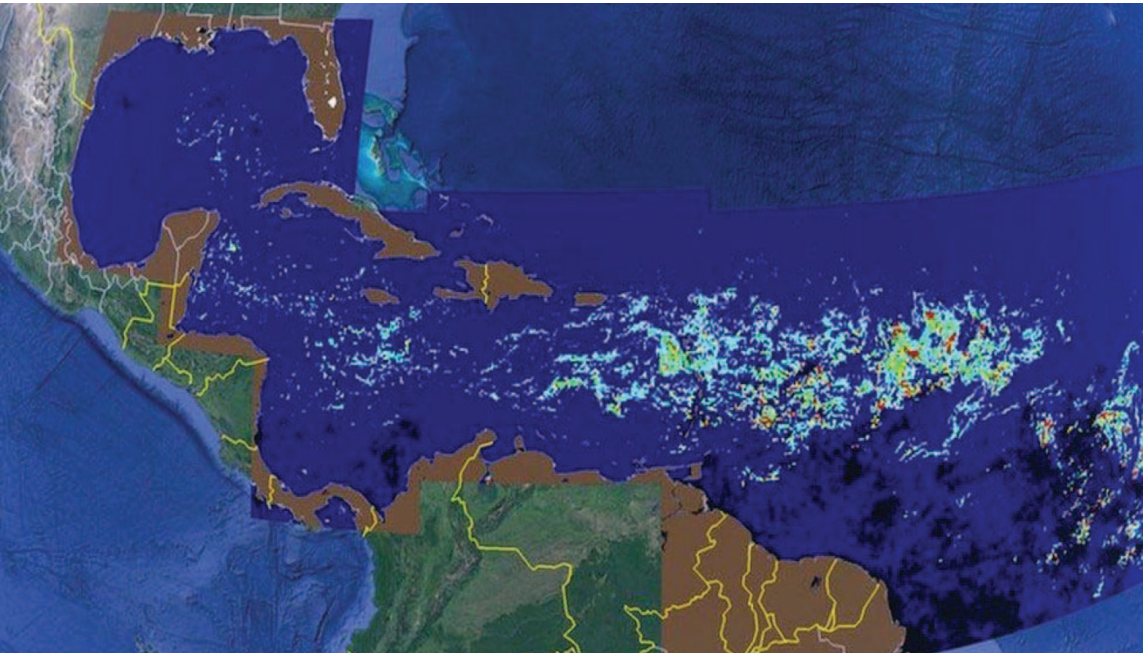

IMAGE SOURCE,UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH FLORIDA OPTICAL OCEANOGRAPHY
Satellite imaging shows the scale of the seaweed belt

The exact reason for the sargassum growth is still being studied.

Dr Chuanmin Hu professor at the University of South Florida said the seaweed needs “enough sun light, warm water, and sufficient nutrients from different sources” to grow fast. He continued to say the “elongated belt is formed because of the ocean currents and surface winds”.

One contributing factor, Dr Barnes said, could be from the Amazon watershed - which has seen an increase in nitrogen that then fertilizes the sargassum.

Many Caribbean islands and the Yucatan Peninsula are also affected.

Last month, Cancun saw “excessive” levels of the seaweed, and Mexico’s Navy previously joined the seaweed fight, sending boats to fish it out of waters before it could reach beaches.

The US Virgin Islands even had to declare a state of emergency due to the menacing seaweed last year.

Guadeloupe and Martinique saw thousands of cases of “acute” exposure to hydrogen sulphide, according to a study published in 2018.

World's first octopus farm proposals alarm scientists

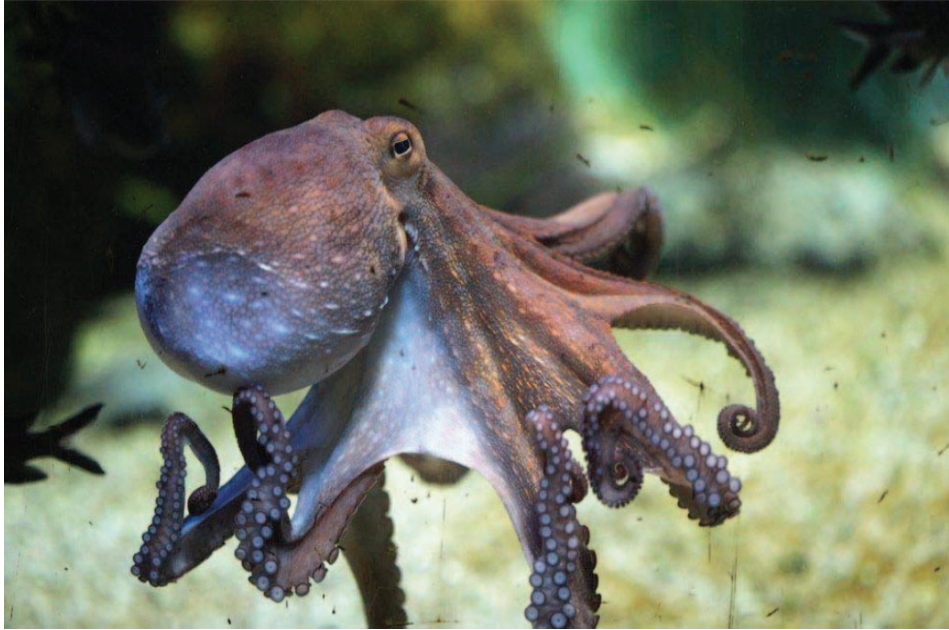

IMAGE SOURCE, WRANGEL

By Claire Marshall

BBC Environment & Rural Affairs Correspondent

A plan to build the world's first octopus farm has raised deep concerns among scientists over the welfare of the famously intelligent creatures.

The farm in Spain's Canary Islands would raise about a million octopuses annually for food, according to confidential documents seen by the BBC.

They have never been intensively farmed and some scientists call the proposed icy water slaughtering method "cruel."

The Spanish multinational behind the plans denies the octopuses will suffer.

The confidential planning proposal documents from the company, Nueva Pescanova, were given to the BBC by the campaign organisation Eurogroup for Animals.

Nueva Pescanova sent the proposal to the Canary Islands' General Directorate of Fishing, which has not responded to a BBC request for comment.

The world's first octopus farm - should it go ahead?

Octopuses caught in the wild using pots, lines and traps are eaten all over the world, including in the Mediterranean and in Asia and Latin America.

The race to discover the secret to breeding them in captivity has been going on for decades. It's difficult as the larvae only eat live food and need a carefully controlled environment, but Nueva Pescanova announced in 2019 that it had made a scientific breakthrough.

The prospect of intensively farming octopus has already led to opposition: Lawmakers in the US state of Washington have proposed banning the practice before it even starts.

Nueva Pescanova's plans reveal that the octopuses, which are solitary animals used to the dark, would be kept in tanks with other octopuses, at times under constant light. The creatures - the species octopus vulgaris - would be housed in around 1,000 communal tanks in a two-storey building in the port of Las Palmas in Gran Canaria.

They would be killed by being put in containers of water kept at -3C, according to the documents.

Currently there are no welfare rules in place, as octopuses have never been commercially farmed before. However studies have shown that this method of slaughtering fish using 'ice slurry' causes a slow, stressful death. The World Organisation for Animal Health says it "results in poor fish welfare" and the Aquaculture Stewardship Council (ASC) - the leading farmed seafood certification scheme - is proposing a ban unless fish are stunned beforehand.

Some supermarkets have already moved away from selling fish that have been killed using ice, including Tesco and Morrisons.

Prof. Peter Tse, a cognitive neuroscientist at Dartmouth University, told the BBC that "to kill them with ice would be a slow death"; it would be very cruel and should not be allowed."

Adding that they were "as intelligent as cats" he suggested that a more humane way would be to kill them as many fishermen do, by clubbing them over the head.

IMAGE SOURCE, GERARDO G. MOURÃO - GGMOURIN@GMAIL.COM

The global octopus trade is now estimated to be worth more than £2.2bn

To supply "premium international markets" including the US, South Korea and Japan, Nueva Pescanova wants to produce 3,000 tonnes of octopus a year. This equates to around one million animals, with some 10-15 octopuses living in each cubic metre of tank, according to campaign group Compassion in World Farming (CiWF), which has studied the plans.

Nueva Pescanova estimates in its documentation that there will be "a mortality rate of 10-15%".

Creatures that feel 'pain and pleasure'

Jonathan Birch, associate professor at the London School of Economics, led a review of more than 300 scientific studies which he says shows that octopuses feel pain and pleasure. It led to them being recognised as "sentient beings" in the UK's Animal Welfare (Sentience) Act 2022. Prof Birch and his co-authors believe that high-welfare octopus farming is "impossible" and that killing in ice slurry "would not be an acceptable method of killing in a lab".

"Large numbers of octopuses should never be kept together in close proximity. Doing this leads to stress, conflict and high mortality". A figure of 10-15% mortality should not be acceptable for any kind of farming."

In a statement to the BBC, Nueva Pescanova said: "The levels of welfare requirements for the production of octopus or any other animal in our farming farms guarantee the correct handling of the animals. The slaughter, likewise, involves proper handling that avoids any pain or suffering to the animal ..."

In the wild, octopuses are fiercely territorial agile hunters. Nueva Pescanova is proposing that the farmed animals be fed with industrially produced dry feed, sourced from "discards and by-products" of already-caught fish.

The tanks would be filled with seawater piped in from an adjacent bay. The tanks would be different sizes for the different phases of the octopuses' life, with the salinity and temperature closely controlled.

The initial brood of 100 octopuses - 70 males and 30 females - would be taken from a research facility, the Pescanova Biomarine Centre, in Galicia, northern Spain.

The plans state that the company has achieved a level of "domestication" in the species and that they do not "show important signs of cannibalism or competition for food".

Elena Lara from CiWF called on the Canary Islands authorities to block construction of the farm, which she said would "inflict unnecessary suffering on these intelligent, sentient and fascinating creatures".

Reineke Hameleers, CEO at Eurogroup for Animals added that the European Commission was currently reviewing its animal welfare legislation and had a "real opportunity" to "avoid terrible suffering".

US Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen has insisted that the country's banking system is "sound" as stock markets continued to rebound.

Ms Yellen told the Senate "Americans can feel confident that their deposits will be there when they need them".

US regulators have been forced to rescue two banks in recent days, sparking investor fears other lenders may be facing problems. Markets in New York rose after a shaky start to trading.

A report that First Republic Bank is considering a sale appeared to unnerv investors. Its share price fell by 23%. Over the past five days, its share price has dropped by nearly 65%.

But the US's three main stock markets indexes - the Dow Jones, Nasdaq and the S&P 500 - are now up after initially opening lower.

Markets in the UK and Europe rebounded earlier on Thursday after troubled banking giant Credit Suisse announced overnight that it secured a £45bn lifeline from Switzerland's central bank.

Fears that Credit Suisse's issues could cause a wider banking crisis had sent stock markets tumbling on Wednesday.

Credit Suisse had sought help from Swiss National Bank after revealing it had found "material weakness" in its financial reporting.

Problems in the banking sector surfaced in the US last week when Silicon Valley Bank (SVB), the country's 16th-largest lender, collapsed followed two days later by the failure of New York's Signature Bank.

Authorities had been forced to step in to prevent a run on bank deposits as panic spread.

Ms Yellen told the Senate Finance Committee: "This week's actions demonstrate our resolute commitment to ensure that depositors' savings remain safe."

Bloomberg reported on Thursday that First Republic Bank, a mid-sized bank like SVB, is examining a sale of the business.

The collapse of Silicon Valley Bank fuelled concerns about the value of bonds held by banks, as rising interest rates made those bonds less valuable.

Central banks around the world - including the US Federal Reserve and the Bank of England - have sharply increased interest rates as they try to curb the rate of price rises, or inflation.

On Thursday, the European Central Bank (ECB) announced a further increase to interest rates from 2.5% to 3%.

Commenting on the recent turmoil, ECB vice president Luis de Guindos said "the banking industry in Europe is resilient" and they have "limited exposure to the institutions of the US".

Banks tend to hold large portfolios of bonds and as a result are sitting on significant potential losses.

The falls in the value of bonds held by banks is not necessarily a problem unless they are forced to sell them.

Help for banks

Credit Suisse's share price rose by 12%. Switzerland's central bank said Credit Suisse had the money it needed but stressed it was ready to step in and help if needed.

Sir John Gieve, former deputy governor at the Bank of England, told the BBC that central banks were sending a "message" that such problems would be contained locally.

Credit Suisse

He added that in Credit Suisse's case, the Swiss National Bank's action was likely to be enough to stop the crisis spreading.

"What we've seen overnight is the Swiss central bank saying 'no, we will not let this get into a disorderly collapse'," he said.

"I don't know what the future for Credit Suisse holds but so far they are still standing and it looks like the Swiss central bank will ensure it's standing long enough to rearrange its affairs for the future."

Credit Suisse, founded in 1856, has faced a string of scandals in recent years, including money laundering charges, spying allegations and high profile departures.

It lost money in 2021 and again in 2022 and has warned it does not expect to be profitable until next year.

Daniel Davies, managing director at Frontline Analysts, and a former bank analyst at Credit Suisse, said that the bank's "millionaire and billionaire client base just seems to have reached the end of their tolerance and they've been taking money out over the last six months at what began to look like an increasing rate".

He added that the Bank of England will have been asking its Swiss counterpart whether it still had faith in Credit Suisse.

"Because the nature of these crises is that when you have a real massive deposit run it is like a tsunami - nothing humans can make can stop it. The only thing you can do is stop it before it turns into a proper deposit run and the only people that can do that are the central banks."

Along with the welfare of the octopuses, CiWF has concerns around the wastewater produced by the farm, which would be pumped back into the sea. Octopuses produce nitrogen and phosphates as waste. "The water entering and leaving the plant will be filtered so that it will have no impact on the environment," Nueva Pescanova told the BBC.

Around 350,000 tonnes of octopus are caught each year - more than 10 times the number caught in 1950 - which is putting pressure on populations. Nueva Pescanova stated that "aquaculture is the solution to ensuring a sustainable yield" and that it would "repopulate the octopus species in the future." However conservationists believe farming them would lower the price, potentially creating new markets.

Nueva Pescanova emphasised to the BBC that it dedicated "great efforts to promote responsible and sustainable performance throughout the value chain to ensure that best practices are adopted."

The government of Gran Canaria has not responded to a request for information.

CWI to create two separate Head Coach positions for Men’s Red Ball and White Ball formats

Strategic split of role to bring specific focus on management of players and development of format specific schedules

ST JOHN’S, Antigua - Cricket West Indies (CWI) today announced that the role of Head Coach for the West Indies Senior Men’s Teams will be split into two separate positions. Recruitment for both Head Coach roles will start immediately for a Red Ball Head Coach for Test and ‘A’ Team cricket, as well as a White Ball Head Coach for One-Day Internationals (ODI) and T20 International (T20I) cricket. Jimmy Adams, CWI’s Director of Cricket said: “After recently completing an independent review of our 2022 ICC World Cup performance, which included a closer look at the roles of the current Head Coach position, we believe it is now necessary to split the role and engage separate coaches for red and white ball formats. The increased frequency of back-to-back multi-format tours combined with the specific demands of the respective formats no longer provides enough time for one individual to adequately plan, prepare and review across bilateral series and franchise itineraries that are so condensed.” Adams added: “Separating the roles will also provide the Head Coaches with more time to oversee players’ ongoing development away from tours directly, and through increased engagement and planning with suitable high-performance programmes and coaches.” According to Adams, the decision to separate the Head Coach roles was made with reference to the recommendation by the independent three-member World Cup Review Group to consider splitting coaching duties as one factor to help improve team preparation. The World Cup Review Group was appointed by CWI to conduct a comprehensive review of the West Indies Men’s team’s early exit from at the ICC Men’s T20 World Cup in Australia last year. The Group was chaired by Justice Patrick Thompson Jr., a High Court Judge of the Eastern Caribbean Supreme Court, and included Brian Lara, the West Indies batting legend, along with former South African, Pakistan, and Sri Lankan international coach, Mickey Arthur. The position of West Indies Men’s Head Coach became vacant when Phil Simmons resigned following the 2022 ICC T20 World Cup, and subsequently relinquished the post following the end of the West Indies tour of Australia last December. Andre Coley is the current Interim Head Coach for the recent Test series in Zimbabwe and the current multi-format tour of South Africa. Recruitments for both Head Coach positions are expected to commence shortly.

West Indies Women Emerging Players Squad announced for High-Performance camp at CCG

ST JOHN’S, Antigua - Cricket West Indies (CWI) named 15 players for a West Indies Women’s Emerging Player High-Performance camp which will be held at the Coolidge Cricket Ground (CCG) from today, Thursday 16 March to Thursday, 30 March. The squad includes several players with international experience and they will work under the guidance of Steve Liburd, Head Coach of the West Indies Women’s Rising Stars Under 19s programme. Among the players selected are teenagers Djenaba Joseph, Trishan Holder and Zaida James, who were part of the West Indies Rising Stars Under 19 team at the recent ICC U19 T20 World Cup and were also selected in the West Indies Senior team at the ICC T20 World Cup in South Africa. Other players with international experience who will be participating are allrounders Jannilea Glasgow, Kaysia Shultz, Sheneta Grimmond, Qiana Joseph and Shabika Gajnabi, while other members of the Rising Stars Under 19 team have been selected. This High-Performance camp continues CWI’s increased investment into the women’s game and forms part of the overall High-Performance Pathway. CWI’s strategic plan has committed resources into developing the women’s cricket at every level. This High-Performance Camp at CCG plays a vital role in the strategy to develop the talent pool and produce the next generation of West Indies Women’s players. Graeme West, CWI’s High-Performance Manager said: “This camp is geared towards players aged 25 and under as part of developing the pool of talent across the region. The camp will offer activities and support across technical, tactical, physical, mental and personal development areas with individualized programmes following each players involvement in the Senior and Under 19 sides in the last six months. “We are looking to increase our investment in our most talented young female players and the introduction of an Academy programme later in the year will provide a further 15 players with full-time support, training and competitive opportunities as they make their way through the CWI High-Performance Pathway,” West said. “The camp represents an opportunity to prepare some of the players that will be strong contenders for Academy places while sharpening the skills of several players that have already performed on the international stage at the senior level. These players will benefit from a fortnight of intensive work leading into a busy summer schedule with Regional Tournaments and International Series planned.” West added: “We also have Cherry-Ann Fraser and Mandy Mangru who will come in for rehab from injuries that have held up their progress, so we hope to help them along their way with the intention that they will be fit for the Senior Women’s Regional tournaments in May.”

Old Road Dismisses Bath, Spurs, Village Deadlock

A three-goal spurt in four minutes saw MFCR Old Road United Jets dismiss Hotsprings Bath United 3-0 on Sunday at Warner Park in the SKNFA Premier League. Old Road struggled to make an impact in the first half, as the hot afternoon sun seemed to have taken a toll on both teams. But in the second half, Old Road found energy and verve, scoring three goals in four minutes to seal the win and another three points.

Old Road was one of only two teams to win their matches in the Premier League on the weekend. Coach Alexis Morris of Old Road, explained why his team started off so flat but played so much better in the second half. "Let me tip my hat to the Bath United team because they really put us to the test," he said. "We started a bit flat. We asked the guys to conserve some energy but to me, they went away from that and as a result of that, they were running all over the pitch... Luckily at the break, we were able to talk, we were able to regroup and we were able to put things together and play the kind of (football) that we are capable of playing," Morris said.

Bath's Coach Alex Claxton sought to explain the reason his team gave up three goals in four minutes. "I would say sometimes the game would throw a number of things at you... and I think this was one of those moments when our players lapsed. I think decision-making played a role in that regard so we have to go back to the drawing board and try to fix those things," Claxton said.

Also on Sunday, Rams Village Superstars drew 1-1 with H.E. Garden Hotsprings.

Assistant Coach of Spurs Rohan Browne, was not happy with the draw, as he said they had several opportunities to win the match. "We dominated the game, to be honest. We dominated from start to end. We had most chances," Brown said. "We had some chances on the break. I am disappointed but the guys played with heart and they finished off the game with one point. Not what we wanted but well done to the team," the assistant coach added.

Coach Stephen Clarke of Village was also not pleased with a draw, saying the result was not what they were looking for. "I expected three points but that's how it goes sometimes. You just have to go back to the playing field, regroup and come back again," Clarke said.

Deadlock In St. Paul's As Both Matches End In Draws

Defending SKNFA Premier League Champions S L Horsfords St. Paul's, snatched a point from the jaws of defeat on Friday night on their home field. It was a last-minute strike from Vinceroy Nelson that gave St Paul's a 1-1 draw with St. Peters FC to give the home fans something to celebrate.

Coach Austin "Dico" Huggins of St. Peters, was upset with the outcome as he felt the seven minutes stoppage time had already elapsed and the match should have ended, preventing St. Paul's from scoring the last-minute goal. Nevertheless, he spoke to the strategy he deployed to restrict St. Paul's from winning the match. "I think that we played exceptionally well in the midfield. We were winning the ball, being first to the ball, playing more aggressive, and then trying to play the ball as quickly as possible to get them out of position," Huggins said. "We were more organized in defense as well, so based on the game we played against them in the President's Cup, we had some work done, especially on the defense," he further disclosed.

In the night's other match in St. Paul's, Jones Group Sandy Point FC, came from behind with 10 men to draw 1-1 with Security Forces FC.

Cayon Maintains Winning Streak With Conaree Victory

FLOW 4G Cayon Rockets solidified their status at the top of the SKNFA Premier League table with their 5th win from five matches on Saturday, edging SOL IAS Conaree FC 3-2 at home in St. Mary's Park, Cayon.

Assistant Coach to Cayon Valentine Anthony was pleased with the win, though he was keen to point out that his team continues to lapse in concentration, as evident in previous matches. "For the past couple of games, we started the first half (well) and in the second half we just come out lackadaisical. But grateful that we got the three points; kudos to my team," Anthony said. He noted that they plan to keep the momentum in remaining at the top of the league and expects a boost as some players are to join the team from injury. "We still have other players to come in and help us to get more depth in the team going forward," Anthony disclosed. Cayon is the only team so far this season with a 100% record in the Premier League.
