The Harsh Reality of Crime and Violence

The recent sentencing of a 29-year-old young man to 45 and a half years in prison has sent shockwaves throughout St. Kitts and Nevis. This case, particularly notable for the severe penalty of the most years of 34 and half years handed down for murder, has left many in a state of surprise.

The gravity of his crimes serves as a stark reminder of the age-old adage that "Crime does not pay."

As the community continues to comment on the consequences of the young man's actions and the judicial punishment, many people are left to ponder whether this case will deter others from embarking on a path of crime and violence.

The lengthy sentence, while a testament to the judicial system's commitment to justice, also highlights a deeper societal issue. How did a young man with his whole life ahead of him end up in such a situation?

The spiritual aspect of this issue cannot be overlooked. As a nation rooted in Christian values, we must consider what our faith teaches us about life and human dignity. The judicial system serves its purpose on Earth, but the moral and spiritual ramifications of such violent behavior are profound. It begs the question: what does God think about such actions? As a community, we should strive to please God and be upstanding citizens, embodying the principles of love, peace, and respect for life.

Quite interestingly, there is talk that the young man, during his imprisonment period, had a spiritual self-check in professing that he has given his life to a Christ.

Reaction to his sentencing has been mixed. While there is relief that justice has been served, there is also a pervasive sense of sorrow for the young man whose life has been thrown away behind bars. This duality reflects the complex nature of crime and punishment. It is not enough to merely applaud the enforcement of the law; we must also reflect on how to prevent such tragedies in the future.

To move forward, we must focus on creating a society that prioritizes peace and love over violence and revenge. This involves investing in education, providing economic opportunities, and fostering environments where young people can thrive. It also means strengthening our collective bonds-embracing 'It takes a village to raise a child' values- and ensuring that everyone, especially the youth, feels valued and supported.

In general, the factors which affect young people vary whether social, economic or the ever-present influence of peer pressure.

These elements, combined with a lack of guidance and opportunities, can steer individuals down the wrong path. It is a grim reality that needs to be addressed holistically.

We must also address the root causes of crime. This requires a concerted effort from all sectors of society-government, religious institutions, educational systems and families. By working together, we can create a more equitable and just society where the temptation of crime is outweighed by the promise of a fulfilling and lawful life.

Ultimately, the recent sentencing of this young man serves as a wake-up call. It is a reminder that we must all do our part to steer our youth away from the pitfalls of crime and towards a future filled with promise and potential. Only then can we hope to break the cycle of violence and build a community grounded in peace and love.

Astaphan Predicts Future Captaincy Of Mikyle Louis

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETTERRE, St. Kitts (Thursday 18th July 2024)- Well-known social and political commentator Dwyer Astaphan has lauded Kittitian cricketer 23-year-old Mikyle Louis, expressing his belief that he has the potential to become the West Indies team captain within the next five years.

Astaphan's praise and prediction were shared in his latest opinion piece on Wednesday 17th July 2024, having applauded the young athlete's recent test match debut at Lords.

Pointing to Louis' scoring of 27 runs, which was top score in the first innings and 14 in the second, he remarked: "I was impressed with his technique and composure, and I'm confident that God willing, he will grow into an excellent international batter. I'm also impressed with him in front of the microphone. This is obviously a sensible, articulate, well-measured and gracious young man. A well-prepared young man, and I believe he can be the West Indies captain in five years' time."

Astaphan highlighted the historic significance of their selection of to Mikyle's and his brother 28-year-old Jeremiah Louis.

"West Indies was awarded test status in 1928 and St. Kitts cricket and our people were kept in the wilderness for 96 years before we would get our first test. And when we got one, we got two-the Louis brothers. Mikyle is the first selection and Jeremiah is the second, and Mikyle is the first to play in a test match. And look where he made his debut last Wednesday, July 10th, 2024 at Lords, the most famous cricket venue on the planet. He scored 27 runs, which was top score in the first innings and 14 in the second."

According to him: "Praise, appreciation and honor and

Well-known social and political commentator Dwyer Astaphan

respect are due to him and Jeremiah and to their parents and the other persons who've been there for them over the years, guiding them along," he said.

The commentator also pointed out the broader implications of their achievements for the nation, calling for greater recognition and support for high achievers in all walks of life.

He lamented the lack of sufficient honor and appreciation for past and present sports heroes and other prominent figures in the community, urging a change in how the nation commemorates and supports its talent.

"Mikyle's achievement has been recognized by the government in the form of a cash grant, I'm told, a piece of land and having a stand or a section of a stand at Warner Park named in his honor. I don't know what the government has in store for Jeremiah and for others to come, because I'm told that over the next four to five years, we can see two or three more Kittitians getting onto the West Indies team. This achievement by the Louis brothers with their strong family support structure provides a classic example.

He continued: "First, of the importance of responsible and purposeful parenting and guardianship in the molding and development of our young people. Second, of the benefits that flow not only to the children of the family, but also to the entire nation. And third, of the need for decision makers and for ourselves, the people, to do all that we can to encourage and facilitate positives in our children and strong and purposeful family and other social structures in our society.

He went on to emphasize the need for a holistic approach to nurturing and honoring talent.

"This is the foundation for the development of a nation, the cornerstone of the sustainable island state that we claim that we want in St. Kitts and Nevis. And as we reflect on the success of the Louis family, as we reflect on the feast that they have provided for us, after 96 years of undeserved famine, and as we reflect on the honor and the joy that they have brought to us all, I also wonder how many other talented young people may have missed out on high achievement over the years because they were not brought up in a sufficiently supportive and molding home and broader community."

Zack’s Traditional Musical Workshop Now Open to All Ages

By: Precious Mills

BASSETTERRE, St.Kitts (Wednesday 17th July 2024)-Under the theme ‘Music is Essential’, the upcoming 18th edition of the Traditional Musical Instrument Workshop, coordinated by well-known local Cultural Preservationist Winston ‘Zack’ Nisbett, this time around will cater to adults and not only children in offering an opportunity for participants of all generations to come together and learn.

During a recent interview with this media house, he highlighted the reasoning behind such.

“This year, instead of having the five to twelve-year-olds as usual, we have gone from five years to above because there are many persons who are into music, they have their own instruments at home but can’t get anybody to train them.”

The summer workshop will run for four weeks from Monday 22nd July to Saturday 24th August 2024 at Zack’s Historical-Cultural Library and Museum located at Buckley’s Estate in Basseterre.

Daily sessions are expected to run from 9 AM to 3 PM, finishing with a graduation ceremony on Saturday 23rd August.

Participants will receive lessons on a range of traditional instruments, including the fife, banjo, baho, quatro and guitar. In addition to music, the workshop will feature classes on clown suit making, fife making, arts and crafts, and reading comprehension in providing a holistic educational experience.

Nisbett emphasized the practical benefits of the workshop, noting, “I want them to master the art of that because the string band is important, and they can make their own money. Those who are not that academically inclined have something they could bank on, and you make good money, especially when the tourists come.”

“We are a strong, thriving tourism industry, like what we have here in St. Kitts-Nevis. We need to have that authentic type music for the visitors and to back up some of the sports. The big drum, the kettle drum; all that are going into teaching about the kettle drum and the bass drum,” he added.

In addition to musical training, participants will gain knowledge about the cultural aspects of St. Kitts and Nevis.

“Apart from learning how to play musical instruments, students will gain invaluable knowledge about the cultural aspects of St. Kitts and Nevis. This is not just about music; it’s about preserving our heritage and fostering a sense of identity and pride among the youth. It is important that we preserve our cultural heritage, and music is a unique custom. It enhances your versatility in terms of the various instruments and the sound, and it gives you a chance to meditate and concentrate; it depends on the type of music. Music is essential for real.”

Nisbett also emphasized the importance of discipline in learning music.

“Discipline is essential in music because there are some people who want to come and leave and go and come when they feel like and have distractions, and so you cannot learn that way. That is why we’re trying to incorporate the big people so the band itself, the string band for me, will have both young and old inside the workshop. We could formulate a proper band to play for any function, any occasion.”

He highlighted the inclusion of the bajo instrument this year. “The bajo is important. The bajo keeps the background, the bass and the marimba. We’ll be teaching them how to play the marimba as well. That is like a bass guitar as well but the bajo always looks within a band. Somebody will play the bajo because that keeps the backbone when you don’t have a guitar.”

He has expressed gratitude for the unwavering support from the business community and other contributors over the past years.

Registration for the workshop is now open, and interested individuals including parents and guardians are encouraged to contact Nisbett at 664-9016 for more information.

Nineteen Nevisians complete Caribbean Vocational Qualification Level 4 Assessor Training

NIA CHARLESTOWN NEVIS (July 17, 2024)- Nineteen Technical, Vocational Education and Training (TVET) teachers on Nevis have completed a four-week Caribbean Vocational Qualification (CVQ) Level 4 Assessor Training as they pursue certification to become CVQ assessors.

CVQ assessors, based on the occupational standard for which they are qualified, conduct assessments on the skills and competency of persons applying for CVQs.

At a closing ceremony held at the Malcolm Guishard Recreational Park on July 12, Minister of Education the Honourable Troy Liburd said getting persons on Nevis trained as CVQ assessors is a big step towards the Federation's pursuit of advancing Technical, Vocational Education and Training (TVET) as a core element of sustainable regional development.

"Today at the culmination of this training for our teachers here on Nevis I am extremely happy. I see we have a big cohort of teachers here and I know it was hard work at the end of the school year.

"If we don't have assessors, if we don't have people who could evaluate the persons training we can't deliver on that CVQ, so I'm very happy."

Counselor Ivan Chen of the Embassy of the Republic of China, (Taiwan) delivered remarks on behalf of Resident Ambassador to St. Kitts and Nevis, His Excellency Michael Lin. He expressed his gratitude to the Government of St. Kitts and Nevis for the partnership.

"We at the Embassy are proud to support these courses to the betterment of the national vocational qualification system in the Federation...By seeing all the outstanding certified training over here I would like to congratulate all of you on your remarkable achievement."

Janesta Charles, one of the facilitators, spoke to the assessment aspect of the training and described the participants as enthusiastic and willing to learn.

"Candidates commenced assessment this week towards their certification in CVQ Level 4. Competency-based assessment requires a varied mix of assessment methodologies, and so the process required that they conduct practical demonstration of their ability to actually do assessments.

Minister of Education in the Nevis Island Administration the Honourable Troy Liburd

"They also had to respond to oral questions, and of course, the final component would require them to complete the development of their portfolios so this assessment process will be completed," she explained.

[British Virgin Islands] - The Haynes Smith Youth Club is proud to announce a new era for the esteemed Haynes Smith Miss Caribbean Talented Teen Pageant. After 41 years of successful events hosted in St. Kitts, the pageant will now be held in different Caribbean countries, starting with the British Virgin Islands for its 42nd edition on Sunday December 29th, 2024. This year marks a momentous occasion as we host the event on the beautiful island of the British

BVI To Host Haynes Smith Miss Caribbean Talented Teen Pageant 2024

Pageant To Rotate Hosts Each Year

Virgin Islands (BVI) at the Multisports Complex, Road Town, Tortola, for the very first time.

This decision comes in response to longstanding requests from franchise holders and participants for greater transparency and accountability in the judging process. Hosting the pageant across various territories will provide fresh perspectives and ensure impartiality, reflecting practices of international competitions such as the Miss World and Miss Universe pageants.

The move also acknowledges that after four decades, the pageant has outgrown its traditional venue. December in St. Kitts is a bustling time filled with carnival events, making it challenging to secure service providers and manage escalating costs. The British Virgin Islands offers an exciting new backdrop for showcasing Caribbean talent and culture.

The BVI Franchise Holder and the Miss Teen BVI Committee will diligently orchestrate the local logistics for this ground-breaking event. They will also be responsible for procuring of the state-of-the-art production facilities, engaging experienced Service Providers, and meticulously planning every aspect of the Pageant, in close collaboration with the Haynes Smith Miss Caribbean Talented Teen Pageant Committee. Our goal is to create a seamless and memorable experience for contestants, guests, and stakeholders alike.

Participants are expected to arrive on Tortola (BVI) on 26th December 2024, and will be accommodated at the Maria’s by the Sea Hotel, Road Town, Tortola, BVI.

The Haynes Smith Youth Club extends its sincerest apologies for any inconvenience this change may cause. We are committed to returning to St. Kitts in the near future as part of our rotational policy, which aims to celebrate the rich diversity of our region by sharing hosting responsibilities among different Caribbean nations.

We look forward to your continued support as we embark on this journey to elevate the Haynes Smith Miss Caribbean Talented Teen Pageant to new heights, fostering unity and cultural exchange throughout our beloved Caribbean.

The Haynes Smith Youth Club has been dedicated to empowering young people through cultural, educational, and leadership initiatives since 1979. The Miss Caribbean Talented Teen Pageant is one of our flagship events, highlighting the talents and aspirations of young women across the Caribbean.

Without Food Security, countries will not have national security, warns former U.S. Ambassador to UN Agricultural Agencies Kip Tom Kip Tom, U.S. agricultural producer and former Permanent Representative of his country to the UN agencies in Rome.

Brasilia, 16 July 2024 (IICA) - Food security is intimately linked to national security in all countries around the world. Therefore, it is essential that smallholder farmers have the tools to increase their productivity, contribute to economic growth, and improve their incomes and quality of life.

This was stated by Ambassador Kip Tom, a U.S. agricultural producer and former Permanent Representative of his country to the UN agencies in Rome, in an interview with the AgroAmerica program, broadcast on the Brazilian TV channel Agro Mais.

“While we cannot do without the large companies engaged in industrial agriculture, we need family farmers. They must be supported by the private sector to access new technologies, education, and knowledge. There must also be public policies in this direction,” Tom said.

The former permanent representative, who is part of a family with seven generations linked to food production in the Midwest of the United States, pointed to Brazil as a positive example, a country which, thanks to science and innovation, has become a world leader in the production of soybean and other commodities in recent decades.

“I lost my father a couple of years ago,” he recalled. “Before he died, he took me to the fields where he started working and where I also worked. He talked to me about the productive yields when he was young and how extraordinarily they had grown over the years with the help of science and with the use of fertilizers, digital technologies, and good practices. Today we can see that artificial intelligence can be used to increase yields while caring for the environment. I see great potential in countries on our continent, such as Brazil, Uruguay, and Argentina. I am very excited about the future of agriculture.”

Tom explained that he himself began as a small farmer and noted that it is positive for countries to strike a balance between large, medium, and small producers, but it is the former who must worry about training and providing tools to the latter to grow.

“I have never met a small-scale farmer who did not want to grow and increase the size of their operation. They want to produce food for the community; therefore, they must be able to access basic technologies to deal with pests and diseases and better adapt to climate change,” he warned.

The Role of IICA

In another part of the interview, Tom emphasized the importance of IICA's role in strengthening a narrative that presents agriculture to the world not only as essential for ensuring food security but also for the development of countries.

“IICA Director General Manuel Otero is doing a great job building alliances with other organizations and sectors that, like IICA, are key to the future of agriculture and to safeguarding food security,” he said.

Tom also spoke about the impact of climate change on the work and livelihoods of farmers in Latin America and the Caribbean.

“Throughout history, our climate has always undergone variations, and farmers have adapted to them for thousands of years. Today, climate change is advancing at a much faster rate, but with innovation and science, we can adapt. Genetics and new technologies provide means to remove carbon from the atmosphere. We can use fewer resources and produce more,” he noted.

Tom also criticized some environmental regulations that are being proposed, which could have negative consequences, especially for medium-sized producers.

“I don't think we, from the Americas, should be telling Europe how to farm, but neither should Europeans pretend to teach us. Local contexts must be respected, and in each country and region, the protagonists know how to adapt to particular conditions,” he said.

“No one cares more about the environment than farmers. They want to preserve it for future generations. Farmers know how to innovate, reduce greenhouse gas emissions, and increase productivity. Many soils have degraded, but today in our continent, no-till farming, the use of cover crops, and other practices have become widespread, allowing us to restore it. Countries like Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay have been leaders in soil preservation.”

Tom also drew attention to the need for international cooperation to address supply chain constraints and the need for countries on the continent to have reliable suppliers to ensure food security for their people.

Data Gaps Hindering Measurement of Cultural and Creative Industries Impact on Caribbean Development

July 16, 2024 - BRIDGETOWN, Barbados - Inadequacies in data collection have been identified by experts as a significant deterrent to measuring the true importance and impact of the cultural and creative industries (CCI) on Caribbean economies, a sector valued at more than USD 1 trillion globally.

The Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) highlighted the CCI as drivers of sustainable development and resilience in the Region during the recent seminar Imagining: Using Creative Industry Research to Devise Development Strategies.

Dr. Marisa Henderson, Chief of the Geneva-based Creative Economy Programme at UN Trade and Development (UNCTAD) shared recent research which showed that total exports of creative services worldwide reached record levels of USD 1.4 trillion in 2022 - almost double that of exports of creative goods at about USD 713 billion.

Despite these impressive figures, Dr. Henderson acknowledged that the existing data likely "does not fully reflect the importance of these industries, because we have not been collecting [enough of] the data to date."

Dr. Deborah Hickling Gordon, a cultural economy consultant, lecturer, and coordinator of the Bachelor in Cultural and Creative Industries at The University of the West Indies, emphasised the scarcity of data as one of the two greatest threats to the development of Caribbean cultural economies.

"The truth of the matter is, if we can't - and if we won't - measure, map, or define the Caribbean cultural economy, we will be unable to adequately plan for its development. It's really as simple and as complicated as that," said Dr.

Hickling Gordon.

Noting the scarcity of political will as the other big threat, Dr. Hickling Gordon advocated for educating Caribbean populations about the importance of their cultural economies. "Many of them still see it as just singing and dancing, but a festival is a source of economic growth because of the gaiety and excitement that it brings. So there needs to be a clearer understanding that there is value in gaiety and excitement."

CDB's Cultural and Creative Industries Innovation Fund (CIIF) project attempts to address data infrastructure gaps by training statisticians in data collection and analysis.

Chief Executive Officer of international development policy consultancy Canaan Bridges Consulting Inc. and CIIF team member, Dr. Marsha Simone Cadogan, pointed out that protecting the intellectual property rights of creators is also essential. "If we're going to incentivise creators to create and to produce content that's valued in society, it needs to be adequately protected."

Sagicor invests in youth and education with continued support of Caribbean Science Foundation

Bridgetown, Barbados: Sagicor continues to show its commitment towards youth and the advancement of education in the Caribbean, through its sponsorship of the Caribbean Science Foundation's (CSF) initiatives. This year, Sagicor has partnered with the Foundation to support the prestigious Student Program for Innovation in Science and Engineering (SPISE) and the Caribbean Computer Coding Workshops (C3W). Since 2018, Sagicor has been a proud and committed sponsor of the CSF, helping to nurture the region's greatest young minds in science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM).

The CSF's SPISE is an annual intense five-week summer program that also acts as a catalyst for economic diversification in the region. It offers Caribbean high school students an enriching learning experience in an environment catered to teaching at the highest STEM education levels. Modelled after the renowned MITES program at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), SPISE aims to cultivate STEM talent in the region's youth, encouraging them to pursue STEM disciplines beyond university and to consider technology-based entrepreneurship as a career option. The program's primary goals are to increase the region's economic diversification and to ensure there are more opportunities created for technology-based jobs. Similarly, the Caribbean Computer Coding Workshop (C3W) is an annual 14-week program that also empowers youth and aims to teach coding skills to Caribbean students and adults, preparing them to face the digital economy, thereby creating a new generation of professionals in the field. The program encapsulates the fundamentals of computer programming, branching from hypertext markup language (HTML) for webpage development, to Python (with its large number of advanced code libraries) giving students a solid foundation from which to work.

Robert Trestrail, Sagicor's President and CEO, said Sagicor remains committed to education as a key part of its corporate social responsibility mandate. "We are pleased to be able to play a role in preparing the region's students for the workplace of the future through technology. By supporting programs such as SPISE and C3W, we invest in the future leaders of the Caribbean, helping to pave the way for the region. These students, with their skills and knowledge, are the ones who will drive technological advancement and overall economic growth, and we are honored to be a part of their journey as they lead the Caribbean towards greater prosperity."

Pound hits highest level against dollar for a year

By Tom Espiner,
Business reporter, BBC News

The pound hit its highest level against the dollar in a year on Wednesday as investors bet on UK interest rates staying higher for longer.

Fresh data on Wednesday showed the rate of inflation was proving more stubborn than expected by some analysts.

This prompted traders to cut bets on an easing of rates in August, and sent the pound above $1.30 for the first time since last July.

The pound has also been boosted by market hopes that the new Labour government will offer economic stability.

Higher rates in the UK increase the pound's value, because it can attract more overseas investment. This creates more demand for sterling, pushing up its value relative to other currencies.

Currency markets responded by betting that UK rates would remain higher for longer.

UK inflation was steady in June, with the headline rate at the Bank of England's target rate of 2%.

But some of the underlying measures of inflation being watched closely by Bank rate-setters remain stubbornly high.

Inflation in the services sector, for example, remained at 5.7% in June, while core inflation, which strips out the effects of more volatile items like energy prices, held at 3.5%.

Some central banks, including Switzerland, Sweden and Canada have cut rates already, but the Bank of England and the US Federal Reserve are yet to make the same move.

The International Monetary Fund raised its outlook for economic growth in the UK on Tuesday to 0.7% this year, from 0.5% in its last set of global forecasts in April.

But it warned the UK was "seeing some persistence" in inflation that might mean interest rates have to stay "higher for even longer".

Kit Juckes, head of FX Strategy at Societe Generale, said he didn't think the rally on sterling would last.

However, he added that

"there's so much uncertainty in the world", and there was stability with a new UK government helping the pound.

A hung parliament in France and upheaval in the US presidential race, with the attempted assassination of Republican candidate Donald Trump on Sunday, and doubts around the ability of President Joe Biden to serve another four years in office, have added to global market jitters.

On Wednesday, King Charles set out Prime Minister Keir Starmer's plans to revive the economy, with a focus on delivering new homes and infrastructure projects.

Emma Wall, head of investment analysis and research at Hargreaves Lansdown, said: "Inflation in at target - and marginally down if you care about decimal places - coupled with a King's Speech rammed full of ambitious reforms and a high growth agenda has caused the pound to bounce."

She added that the key to sustaining the rally will be ongoing economic data, and the Bank of England's decision on interest rates which is due on 1 August.

Taiwan’s Hsieh Su-wei and her partner Jan Zielinski of Poland won the mixed doubles title at The Championships Wimbledon July 14 in London, continuing Hsieh’s stellar performance in global tennis, according to the Ministry of Education.

In the 76-minute finals against Giuliana Olmos and Santiago Gonzalez from Mexico, Hsieh and Zielinski won the first three games in the first set, and despite their opponents’ best efforts, the duo ultimately triumphed with two straight wins 6-4 and 6-2.

Upon hearing the good news, President Lai Ching-te sent a congratulatory message to Hsieh in which he lauded the pair’s outstanding performance and encouraged Hsieh to keep making her country proud, the MOE said.

The 38-year-old will team with 20-year-old Tsao Chia-yi to represent Taiwan at the 2024 Summer Olympic Games women’s doubles, set to start July 26 in Paris.

This is Hsieh’s second Grand Slam mixed doubles title, following her win, also with Zielinski, at the Australian Open earlier this year. She won the women’s doubles titles at the Australian Open this year, the French Open in 2023 and 2014, and Wimbledon in 2023, 2021, 2019 and 2013. (SFC-E)

Sullivan, 14, becomes youngest MLS player

Published BBC Sports

Fourteen-year-old Philadelphia Union midfielder Cavan Sullivan has become the youngest ever Major Soccer League player.

Sullivan, who is expected to move to Manchester City when he is 18, was an 85th-minute substitute in the 5-1 win over New England Revolution at Subaru Park in Pennsylvania.

At 14 years and 293 days, he broke the record set by Freddy Adu, who was 14 years and 306 days when he played for DC United in 2004.

The teenager also became the youngest North American player in the top flight of a team sport.

Sullivan’s brother Quinn, 20, was one of Union’s goal-scorers on Wednesday.

Asked about his brother’s goal, scored shortly before he came on, Sullivan said: “It was absolute chaos. Awesome goal from him, great finish.

“I think the combo of his goal and me coming in as a sub was complete anarchy. Honestly, it was one of the loudest things I have ever heard. The stadium was electric.”

Sullivan added: “This is just the start. I am really happy to

Super Bowl winner ‘wrongly handcuffed’ on United flight

The former Denver Bronco was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 2017

United Airlines has apologised to NFL Hall of Fame legend Terrell Davis after the two-time Super Bowl champion said he was “wrongly handcuffed” on a flight to California.

Mr Davis said he was removed from a United Airlines aircraft last Saturday after a flight attendant accused the former Denver Broncos star of hitting him.

The 51-year-old, who was flying with his family from Denver, spoke about his ordeal on social media. He said the claim was false and described feeling “traumatised” by it.

United Airlines told the BBC it had removed the flight attendant have done this but it is honestly the first box checked off.

“I know it is all about where you finish, not where you start.”

Adu, now 35, said: “Big congrats to Cavan Sullivan for his record breaking debut today.

“That’s a hard record to break and the kid did it. Well done and good luck my man.”

Sullivan signed for Philadelphia in May, in the biggest homegrown player deal in MLS history.

“The collaboration between the Union and the City Group was - that did it for me. I always watch Man City. They’re like every kid’s dream team,” Sullivan told ESPN, external at the time.

“For [Philadelphia and Man City] to come together and agree on something - I sat with my family and my agents and we decided that it was the best plan.”

Before Sullivan’s debut, Union manager Jim Curtin told the MLS website:, external “The sky’s the limit.

“He’s a generational talent, one who can really change the game by himself.”

The youngest male player to appear in the English top flight is Ethan Nwaneri, who made his Arsenal debut at 15 years and 181 days in 2022.

from duty while it investigates the matters and reviews its policies.

Posting on his Instagram, Mr Davis released a statement explaining that during the flight’s beverage service his son had asked for a cup of ice.

In an effort to get his son the ice, Mr Davis said he “lightly tapped” the flight attendant on the arm to get his attention, only to hear him respond, “Don’t hit me!”

The flight attendant then left the cart and went to the front of the plane, according to the Instagram account.

“I was confused, as were the passengers in front of me who witnessed the exchange, Mr Davis wrote. “I thought nothing of it other than this particular employee was incredibly rude and blatantly wrong in his accusations of me hitting him.”

Japan gymnast ‘set to miss Olympics for smoking’

Shoko Miyata won her maiden national championship in April

Published BBC Sports

Japan women’s artistic gymnastics captain Shoko Miyata is set to be sent home from the Olympic Games after allegedly breaking a smoking ban, the country’s Kyodo news agency has reported., external

An investigation by the Japan Gymnastics Association (JGA) will be carried out which leaves Miyata’s participation at the Paris Olympics in doubt, it said.

Smoking is in violation of the association’s code of conduct.

The 19-year-old was not seen at Wednesday’s open training session in Monaco with her absence said to be “for certain reasons”, the JGA’s head of development told Kyodo.

Miyata, who won a bronze medal at the 2022 World Championships in Liverpool, will be interviewed by the JGA and her Juntendo University team once she returns to Japan.

Japan are aiming to gain their first artistic gymnastics team medal since the 1964 Tokyo Games.

The Paris Games open on 26 July.

Mr Davis said that when the plane arrived at Orange County’s John Wayne Airport, he and other passengers were told to remain seated. FBI agents and local authorities then boarded the plane, placed him in handcuffs in front of his wife and three children and then removed him from the flight.

He said the “entire flight of passengers watched in silence”.

A United Airlines spokeswoman told the BBC the company has apologised to Mr Davis and continues to discuss the incident with him.

“This is clearly not the kind of travel experience we strive to provide,” she said.

“We have removed the flight attendant from duty while we closely look into this matter and we are reviewing our policies around incidents like this.”

Mr Davis was a star running back for the Denver Broncos, playing for them from 1995 to 2001.

He helped Denver win Super Bowls XXXII and XXXIII, remains the team’s all-time leading rusher and was inducted into the Hall of Fame in 2017.
