What is Up with That Child Murder in Antigua?

As a society, whenever a child is placed in danger, something within us is shaken to the core. We collectively grieve, we feel an unbearable sadness and we are left grappling with the unthinkable.

The recent tragedy surrounding the kidnapping and murder of 9-year-old Chantel Crump in Antigua has sent shockwaves through the island and reverberated across the region, igniting outrage, sorrow and disbelief.

The arrest of a 20-year-old woman from the Hispanic community in connection with this horrendous crime has fueled widespread debate. She stands accused of luring the young girl into a car before the child's lifeless body was discovered on a beach. However, while some have been expressing anger towards the accused woman, others strongly believe that she did not act alone. Despite the widespread speculation, law enforcement authorities in Antigua have not indicated that other suspects are involved.

Social media has become a breeding ground for rampant theories. Some claim the crime was a ritualistic sacrifice while others fixate on reports-since debunked by police as being false-that the child was found dismembered and missing her eyes. The Antiguan police have been cautioning the public against the spread of misinformation, urging restraint in an emotionally charged climate. Yet, beyond the rumors and speculation, the stark reality remains: a child is gone, her life stolen in an act of unthinkable brutality.

Where do we go from here? How do we respond-not just the Antiguan but as a regional community bound by our shared humanity? We must confront the hard questions about how we, as a society, protect our vulnerable members-our children. It is imperative that we strengthen child protection measures and ensure that our communities are safe spaces where no child is at risk of such a horrifying fate.

Already, discussions have surfaced about introducing a child protective alert system in Antigua and Barbuda-an essential step in prevention and early intervention. But it cannot stop there. It requires an all-hands-on-deck approach, where families, schools, communities, and governments work in unison to safeguard children from potential harm. Tragedies like Chantel's must serve as catalysts for meaningful change, ensuring that no other innocent life is lost due.

The time for action is now. This devastating loss must not be in vain. Our children deserve better. They deserve to grow up in a world where they are protected, cherished, and safe. And it is up to all of us to make that a reality.

Medical Doctor Links Poor Oral Health To Cancer, Other Conditions

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETTERRE, St. Kitts (Wednesday 20th March 2025) - Cardiovascular disease, cancer and Alzheimer’s are among the serious health conditions linked to poor oral health, according to local medical practitioner Dr. Natalie Osborne in making reference to growing scientific research.

For the occasion of World Oral Health Day (observed on March 20), Dr. Osborne pointed at the connection between oral health and overall well-being during an interview on Freedom FM’s SKN Today with host Jamiella McPhail on Wednesday 19th March 2025.

“So most people know that they’re supposed to brush and floss daily, but you might be surprised that oral health is much more than just preventing cavities and keeping your smile white and pearly,” Dr. Osborne explained. “It has a direct link to your overall health. Problems that affect your teeth and your gums can also affect your entire body, leading to different health conditions and complicating existing health issues.”

She noted that poor oral hygiene could contribute to heart disease, lung infections and diabetes complications.

“Studies are continuously being done showing the relationship between oral health and cancers. We have to improve our oral health so that we can improve our overall well-being. You can often look at a person’s oral health-the condition of their teeth and gums-and get a general idea of their overall health.”

Dr. Osborne outlined some of the key warning signs of poor oral health including gingivitis, tooth decay and periodontal diseases.

“You start getting infections or inflammation of the gum-we call that gingivitis,” she explained. “You also have tooth decay and periodontal diseases, which are serious gum diseases leading to gum loss.”

Gingivitis, she said, is a mild form of gum infection that causes irritation, redness, swelling, and bleeding.

“[Have you] ever been brushing your teeth and, when you spit out, you see some blood...? That’s inflammation around the teeth and gums,” she described. “If untreated, it can worsen into periodontitis, a severe gum infection leading to gum recession, bone loss, and ultimately, tooth loss.”

Dr. Osborne also highlighted the role of plaque in dental disease.

“Plaque is a mixture of bacteria, food particles and saliva,” she noted. “If not removed regularly by brushing and flossing, it forms a sticky layer around the gum line and teeth, leading to dental problems.”

As understood, the dangers of poor oral hygiene extend far beyond the mouth. Dr. Osborne emphasized that gum disease has been linked to serious medical conditions, including heart disease, strokes, pneumonia, pregnancy complications and even Alzheimer’s disease.

“One of the most studied and most documented connections is cardiovascular disease,” she said. “Oral health leads to direct complications-coronary heart disease, clogged arteries, and heart attacks. That’s something so serious.”

She further explained how bacteria from the mouth can enter the bloodstream, leading to dangerous infections.

“If you have poor oral health and go to pull a decayed tooth, that bacteria can get into the bloodstream,” she warned. “For people with heart conditions, especially those with artificial valves, this can lead to endocarditis-a serious infection of the inner lining of the heart.”

For pregnant women, poor oral health can have severe consequences.

“It can lead to gestational diabetes, low birth weight, premature delivery, miscarriage, or even stillbirth,” Dr. Osborne cautioned. “Pregnant women must ensure their oral health is well maintained.”

Dr. Osborne stressed the importance of diet in maintaining oral health.

“A lot of the foods we consume daily contribute to tooth decay,” she said. “Sour candies, bread, and carbonated beverages-these are filled with sugars that feed harmful bacteria, producing acids that destroy tooth enamel.”

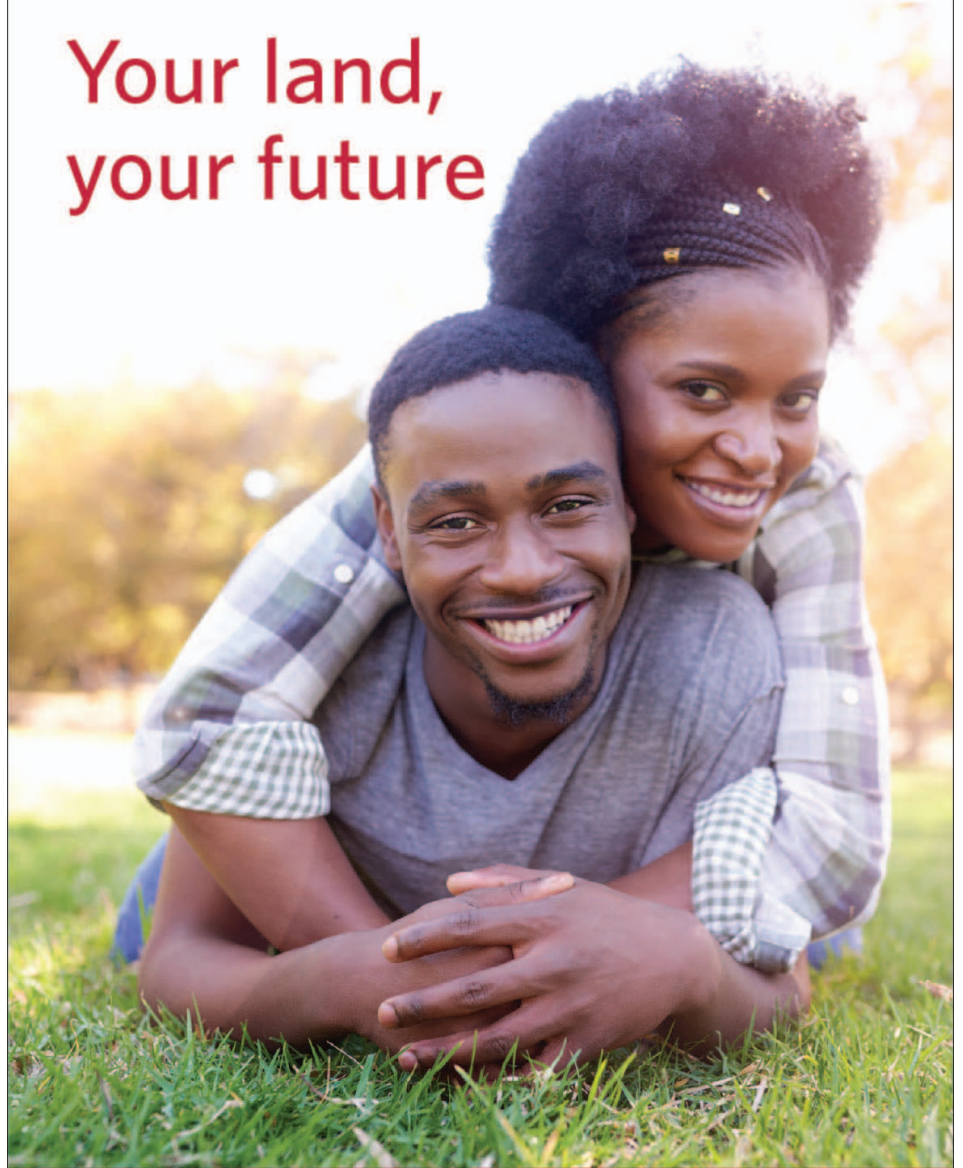

She also highlighted the dangers of smoking and alcohol consumption.

“Tobacco use and excessive alcohol can contribute to periodontal disease and tooth loss,” she explained. “Many people don’t realize that there’s a strong connection between alcohol consumption and losing their teeth.”

Recent studies have also explored the relationship between oral health and conditions such as Alzheimer's disease and cancer.

“People do not relate oral health to Alzheimer's but studies are showing a link,” Dr. Osborne noted. “Similarly, gum disease has been associated with gastrointestinal cancers, lung cancer, breast cancer, prostate cancer, and even uterine cancer. Our entire body is interconnected, and as science evolves, more information is coming out.”

She had advised that oral health should never be neglected.

“It's not just about having a bright smile; it's about your overall health and well-being,” she said. “Good oral hygiene, regular dental check-ups and a healthy diet can make a major difference in preventing disease.”

Officials: PAM Open to Another Election Team Up

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETTERRE, St. Kitts (Wednesday 20th March 2025) -The People's Action Movement (PAM) party has signaled its willingness to collaborate with another political party ahead of the next general elections, according to remarks made by party officials at a press conference held on Wednesday 19th March 2025 at PAM Headquarters.

Speaking at the event, former PAM leader Dr. Shawn Richards indicated that while the party is focused on its independent efforts, it remains open to considering working with another party "if necessary".

"I do believe that PAM is very much capable of winning the next general election. It is going to take work, it is going to take identifying candidates for the various constituencies, and they need to begin to do the work. The fact is that the people have seen the performance of this government, and persons have been left wanting. This government has failed the people of St. Kitts and Nevis," Richards stated.

He emphasized that the party is committed to addressing national concerns, stating: "PAM is doing the necessary work to ensure that PAM is able to go back into government. The motto of PAM has been putting people first. That is indeed what we are committed to doing."

Richards also noted that PAM has historically demonstrated a capacity to collaborate with other political organizations.

"Perhaps the only political party within the Federation of St. Kitts and Nevis which has demonstrated that it has the capacity to work with any political party throughout the Federation of St. Kitts and Nevis. And so we are open to the idea, if necessary, to look at the elections then and determine if it is in our best interest to work with any of the other political parties."

PAM's current leader, Natasha Grey-Brookes, echoed Richards' sentiments, expressing confidence in the party's ability to return to government.

"I too agree with Dr. Richards that the People's Action Movement will be returned to office after the next general election. We are putting in the work. We are ensuring that we put all the necessary things in place, making sure that our people are trained. We are finalizing some of our candidates. And so we know that this is not going to be an easy walk through the park," she said.

Regarding potentially working with other parties, she stated: "Even when we had a majority, even when we had six seats, we were willing to work with different political parties. We are willing to do that if it is necessary, but it is based on trust. We must ensure that our ideas and our philosophies are not too different because we are not going to make our people suffer for the sake of joining with anyone. The people matter most, and whatever decision the People's Action Movement makes, it must be for the people."

In the February 2015 General Elections, the newly formed three-party Team Unity coalition-comprising PAM, the People's Labour Party (PLP) and Nevis' the Concerned Citizens Movement (CCM) - secured victory, unseating the St. Kitts-Nevis Labour Party (SKNLP) and forming the new government led by Dr. Timothy Harris of PLP with Dr. Richards as a Deputy Prime Minister.

However, in the lead-up to the August 2022 elections, the coalition dissolved amid public disputes and allegations directed at the PLP by its former partners. All three parties contested the election independently, and the SKNLP, led by Dr. Terrance Drew, won six seats-namely in St.

PM Drew: Gov’t Has Mandate to Lead Responsibly

‘...there will be [economic] growth this year’

By: Spokesman Newsroom

BASSETERRE, St. Kitts (Wednesday, 20th March 2025) - Prime Minister and Minister of Finance Dr. Terrance Drew has highlighted his administration’s commitment to handling the affairs of the country responsibly, emphasizing that the people have given his government a clear mandate to lead.

Speaking at a recent Cabinet press conference held on Thursday 6th March 2025, PM Drew discussed the latest International Monetary Fund (IMF) report, which highlighted the nation’s economic growth and repeated the government’s approach to financial management without imposing additional burdens on the people.

“I want to say clearly that we’ve taken the IMF’s recommendations very seriously in terms of consolidation and so forth, in terms of the tax regime, some of which we will address without bringing any extra burden to our people,” said PM Drew. “Now, when you look at the IMF Report, we expect that there will be growth this year because the economy - as I told you-this is our year of recovery as we transition our economy to end the heavy dependence on just the CBI program, and so we intend to take a number of measures.”

He outlined his government’s commitment to renewable energy, stating that the IMF has urged swift action on the matter. “One with respect to renewable energy, they ask that we do it as quickly as possible, which we have been working on since day one. And I want to thank the Minister of Energy for his work on this one,” he said.

PM Drew announced that the government has secured funding for the drilling phase of the geothermal project, with support from the Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) and the Saudi Fund for Development.

“We have now secured the funding to do the drilling for the geothermal project, and the Premier of Nevis has spoken to this. The funds that we have secured come from the CDB, and we have a meeting this afternoon at 5 p.m. with the CDB as we near the completion of the procurement and bidding process to start the drilling,” he explained.

The Saudi government has also partnered with St. Kitts and Nevis in the energy sector, providing funding for new generators and supporting geothermal energy development.

“The Saudis, as we know, they are also helping us with our brand-new generators to be installed here, and they are now partnering with us to get the geothermal done, which I think would be to the benefit of all of our people,” PM Drew stated.

PM Drew also highlighted ongoing efforts to strengthen financial institutions such as the National Bank, Social Security and the Development Bank, which have faced challenges in recent years.

“We take these recommendations very seriously because for the longevity of our country, we want to make sure that we are set on a solid foundation,” he said. “With respect to the Development Bank, the IMF did its own assessment, and I have been reporting to our people the state in which we found the Development Bank. It is sad; don’t even have an audit to speak to international funds to help us access financial resources to help our transition to a sustainable island state.” PM Drew reiterated his government’s commitment to ensuring that the Development Bank is never mismanaged again. “We’ll continue to work to reform the Development Bank so that it can be an institution never to be bastardized again,” he emphasized.

The Prime Minister also addressed concerns regarding the management of the Sugar Industry Diversification Foundation (SIDF) under previous administrations.

“As you know, with respect to the SIDF-whereby the Labour administration led by the Rt. Hon. Dr. Denzil Douglas left about $300 million plus in raw cash plus what was to come in - a total of over $400 million was spent from the SIDF,” PM Drew revealed. “I’m not talking about the CBI program; I’m talking about SIDF as a fund. Over $400 million was spent-nearly half a billion dollars-and the country was not informed.”

The Prime Minister emphasized that forensic audits are ongoing, and each discovery raises more concerns. “Now we are doing all the forensic audits, and the more we dig, the more we find. This seems like a bottomless pit. How can you spend over $400 million of people’s money and not inform them?” he questioned.

To ensure future financial stability,

International Relations - Regional Integration

Saint Martin’s Accession to the OECS - A Landmark Development for Regional Integration

OECS Media Release - March 19, 2025

The Territorial Council of Saint Martin officially advanced its position towards associate membership in the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States (OECS) on March 19, 2025, marking a pivotal moment in the region’s ongoing efforts toward greater integration and collaboration. The Opening Ceremony of the 76th Authority Meeting of the OECS and the Accession Ceremony of Saint Martin to the OECS was held at Secrets St. Martin Resort and Spa, and was filled with cultural vibrance and reminders of the successes, goals, and benefits of regional integration.

Saint Martin is now the 12th Member State of the OECS, joining the Protocol Member States of Antigua and Barbuda, Dominica, Grenada, Montserrat, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and the Associate Member States of Anguilla, British Virgin Islands, Martinique and Guadeloupe. It is now the third French Overseas Territory with associate membership, highlighting their eagerness to strengthen connections in the region through diplomacy and development.

Prime Minister of Saint Lucia, Hon. Philip J. Pierre, and Chair of the OECS Authority, in his remarks on the occasion said,

“In keeping with the vision of our founding fathers to continue to organise ourselves into larger frameworks to respond to the challenges of our time, the accession of Saint Martin to the OECS marks an important moment in our regional journey. On behalf of the governments and peoples of this region, I welcome you wholeheartedly to the OECS family. Your membership is clear evidence that there continues to be a strong demand for deeper engagement with the OECS.”

At the ceremony, the President of the Territorial Council of Saint Martin, Louis Mussington, expressed thankfulness that the moment of accession was finally happening.

He said: “I am not saying that this is the pinnacle. However, this ceremony of accession of Saint-Martin to OECS is definitely a key moment for Saint-Martin, an historical one. As I’m looking to the audience I see cultural diversity, I see our young caribbean from Saint-Martin, the future of our Island involved as well in sharing this moment with us.

“Today, through our membership of the OECS, we are establishing a formal inter-institutional dialogue. This closer relationship with our neighbours will be supported by strengthened and structured cooperation and initiatives in a variety of areas such as health and medical services, SME growth, trade and education, to name but a few. This quest for economic prosperity and human development for my fellow citizens makes all the more sense given that Saint-Martin, despite its small size, is geo-strategically positioned and belongs to two spheres of political influence: one immediate and Caribbean, the other more distant and European.”

Commemorating the milestone of Saint Martin’s accession, a feat which has seen long-time engagement between the two parties, Dr. Didacus Jules, the Director General of the OECS, said:

“Saint Martin’s accession is another milestone in this unfolding story of the Eastern Caribbean. You join a community that enthusiastically embraces the French, English, and Kweyol voices that echo across these islands. Over the years, we have seen with Martinique and Guadeloupe that greater harmony in health, education, culture, trade, and environmental protection flows naturally when we open our arms to one another, mindful of the differences that shape us, yet rooted in the common Caribbean identity that calls us to unity.

“Saint Martin now stands poised to write its own chapter in this evolving narrative. Your experiences - whether in health services, tourism, bilingual education, or advanced digital solutions - will enrich the entire OECS, just as you will benefit from a wider circle of partners committed to standing with you in times of difficulty and celebrating your achievements in times of success.

In May 2024, President Mussington led a delegation to Saint Lucia for a series of high-level talks with Dr. Jules, and the leadership team of the OECS Commission. These discussions highlighted the long-term benefits of Saint Martin’s accession to the OECS, which will help strengthen regional cooperation and allow Saint Martin to contribute meaningfully to key decisions affecting member states. President Mussington expressed Saint Martin’s readiness to participate in the priorities and goals of the OECS especially through education and health.

The announcement of Saint Martin’s accession has been met with widespread support, especially from the other Member States.

the government is implementing a sovereign wealth fund. “The IMF has given us the framework for our sovereign wealth fund, which we will implement this year. So that when we raise capital again at a national level, we can put it in that fund. And that fund will be set up in such a way to make us more resilient and make us more stable,” he stated.

PM Drew reaffirmed that his government was

AFP Anas Aremeyaw Anas speaking on stage at a press freedom event in London. He wears a black hat and his face is covered by long columns of yellow beads. AFP Anas Aremeyaw Anas famously wears beaded masks to protect his anonymity

A US court awarded Ghanaian investigative journalist Anas Aremeyaw Anas $18m (£14m) in damages, after a jury said he was defamed by former Ghanaian MP Kennedy Agyapong.

The case stems from comments Agyapong made about Anas after his BBC investigation in 2018 that exposed football corruption in Ghana and elsewhere.

The court heard that Agyapong, among other accusations made on a podcast, had called the reporter a “criminal” and alleged he was behind the murder of fellow journalist Ahmed Suale.

Anas lost a similar legal action in Ghana seven years ago. But after the release of the podcast episode in 2021 Anas went to court in the US state of New Jersey where Agyapong has a property.

The politician was in New Jersey when he was interviewed for the Daddy Fred Show podcast, according to court papers filed by his lawyers.

Last week’s initial verdict was confirmed on Tuesday. The $18m in damages was the result of a unanimous decision by an eight-member jury in Essex County Superior Court in New Jersey, finding Agyapong liable for defamation.

The figure included $8m in punitive damages.

“Justice has prevailed. This victory is not just for me, but for truth, press freedom, and every journalist who risks everything to expose corruption and wrongdoing,” Anas said in response.

“No amount of intimidation or falsehood will silence the pursuit of accountability even in the face of assassination. Our work continues, undeterred and unafraid.”

The journalist, who has won multiple international awards for his reporting, has vowed to continue fighting corruption and holding wrongdoers accountable.

Agyapong’s lawyers had unsuccessfully argued that the case should not have been brought in the US in the first place. They also said that the comments made on the podcast were the kinds of things other courts had described as hyperbole and opinion and were not subject to a defamation case.

Meanwhile, police in Ghana have arrested a suspect in connection with the murder of Anas’ colleague, Ahmed Hussein Suale, who was killed in

The suspect allegedly shared pictures of the undercover journalist with a popular Ghanaian politician before his death.

The death of Ahmed was also linked to a football corruption expose.

The investigation sought to expose corruption in African football and was reported by BBC Africa Eye.

Taiwan to host 1st World Bird Fair in September

Publication Date: March 18, 2025 | twitter share iconCopy link iconA-A+

Taiwan will host the inaugural World Bird Fair Sept. 20-21 in the central city of Taichung to promote bird conservation and birdwatching ecotourism, the Tourism Administration said March 17.

Taiwan will host the inaugural World Bird Fair Sept. 20-21 in the central city of Taichung to promote bird conservation and birdwatching ecotourism, the Tourism Administration said March 17.

The announcement was made by TA Director-General Chou Yung-hui while welcoming a delegation from the World Birdfairs Council March 13 in Taipei City. The WBC is a global nonprofit organization that represents birding events across the world.

Taiwan’s diverse landscapes make it a prime destination for birdwatching, with 691 bird species recorded, including 32 endemic species and 52 subendemic ones, the organizers said. The fair will feature two experience-sharing forums, followed by a trip to Dasyueshan Forest Recreation Area, the most popular birding site in central Taiwan, the TA said, anticipating representatives from 25 countries to gather in Taiwan for the event.

According to Chou, ecotourism is among the fastest-growing tourism sectors in the postpandemic era. The first ever bird fair in Taiwan will help promote the country’s rich avian biodiversity and develop green and sustainable tourism, he said, adding that the TA will take the opportunity to showcase the country’s 13 national scenic areas to attract more foreign visitors.

During their stay in Taiwan, the 10-member WBC delegation toured the Tri-Mountain National Scenic Area and the main venues of the bird fair.

Ornithologist Horacio Matarasso from Argentina said the WBC has grown from a small entity in 2020 to a global organization with more than 50 birding associations as members. He expects the upcoming event to bring WBC members even closer together.

Naturalist and wildlife guide Andrew Sebastian from Malaysia described Taiwan as a portal to Asian birding, saying that Taiwan is an ideal candidate to become a major birdwatching destination, while Maria Marth from Brazil praised Taiwan for its urban greening efforts. (SFC-E)

“Political Differences Should Not Divide Us” PM Drew - Joint Cabinet Meeting Reinforces Dialogue and Cooperation Between St. Kitts and Nevis

Basseterre, St. Kitts and Nevis, March 18, 2025 – The Federal Cabinet of St. Kitts and Nevis and the Nevis Island Administration (NIA) Cabinet yesterday, March 17, met for the first Joint Cabinet Meeting of 2025, reaffirming their commitment to fostering collaboration and advancing national development. The meeting, held in St. Kitts at the Park Hyatt, focused on key national priorities, with discussions centered on strengthening inter-island cooperation, climate resilience, economic diversification, and national security.

Premier of Nevis, Hon. Mark Brantley, opened the discussions by underscoring the importance of continuous dialogue between the two administrations. “Nothing in this world is ever achieved without the ability to communicate. Dialogue is important when there are problems, but even in good times, dialogue remains essential. It is through open discussion that we build understanding, foster cooperation, and ensure that we are working in the best interests of all our people.”

Premier Brantley went on to emphasize that the relationship between the two islands has improved significantly in recent years due to greater communication and a shared commitment to finding common ground on issues of national importance.

Prime Minister Hon. Dr. Terrance Drew also echoed this sentiment, emphasizing that while political differences will always exist, they should not prevent the two administrations from working together on critical matters.

“It is obvious that there would always be some level of political differences, but we don’t always have to disagree on everything. There are some things that really can bring us together as a people.” Dr. Drew pointed to the joint efforts in tackling crime and violence as a successful example of cooperation, noting that both administrations agreed on the need for a unified, all-of-society approach, which has already yielded positive results.

The meeting’s agenda was extensive, reflecting the shared priorities of both St. Kitts and Nevis. One of the central topics of discussion was the continued development of geothermal energy, a transformative project that has received significant international attention and investment. Prime Minister Drew stressed that the successful completion of the geothermal project could fundamentally reshape the Federation’s economic landscape, providing a reliable, renewable energy source that would reduce reliance on fossil fuels, lower energy costs, and create new economic opportunities. “The geothermal project has the potential to transform St. Kitts and Nevis. The IMF has acknowledged that this initiative could be a game-changer, even reducing our dependence on the Citizenship by Investment (CBI) program if we choose to.”

Another key issue discussed was economic diversification, particularly the need to build a more resilient economy that is not solely reliant on CBI revenue. Prime Minister Drew reiterated his administration’s commitment to expanding sectors such as renewable energy, agriculture, and digital finance, all of which are key pillars of the government’s Sustainable Island State Agenda. “The goal is not to discard CBI,” the Prime Minister clarified, “but to ensure that our economy is so diversified that our vulnerabilities are decreased, and our resilience is increased.”

Discussions also touched on national security, with both administrations reaffirming their commitment to reducing crime and ensuring the safety of all citizens and residents. Prime Minister Drew highlighted the effectiveness of the collaborative crime-fighting strategy implemented between the two islands, stating that continued partnership on security matters would be a priority going forward.

With a packed agenda covering critical issues, yesterday's Joint Cabinet Meeting reinforced the importance of collaboration in governance. The discussions reflected a shared determination to move beyond historical divisions and work toward common goals that benefit all citizens of St. Kitts and Nevis.

As the meeting concluded, both leaders expressed their confidence that through regular engagement and collaboration, the Federation could continue to progress and thrive in an increasingly complex global environment.

Family sues Boeing over whistleblower death

Theo Leggett
Business correspondent, BBC News

This story contains details of someone taking their own life, which some readers may find distressing.

The family of a Boeing whistleblower who took his own life last year has filed a wrongful death lawsuit against the company. The complaint alleges that John Barnett was subjected to a campaign of harassment, abuse and humiliation after he raised concerns about safety issues. It claims that the conduct of the company was “the clear, foreseeable cause” of Mr Barnett’s death. Boeing said it was saddened by Mr Barnett’s death and extended its condolences to his family. The former Boeing manager was found dead from what police described as a self-inflicted gunshot wound in the car park of a Charleston hotel on 9 March last year.

The 146-page lawsuit has been brought by his mother, Vicky Stokes, and his brothers Rodney and Michael on behalf of his estate. It was filed on Wednesday in the US District Court of South Carolina. It attributes his death to Boeing’s actions, including what it describes as a retaliatory campaign by his managers that amounted to a “hostile work environment”. “Whether or not Boeing intended to drive John to death or merely destroy his ability to function, it was absolutely foreseeable that Boeing’s conduct would result in PTSD and John’s unbearable depression... Boeing’s conduct was the clear cause, and the clear foreseeable cause, of John’s death,” it says. It describes Mr Barnett as a dedicated, idealistic worker who “took his role seriously in protecting the flying public” and “believed that he had a personal, legal and moral obligation to ensure” that every possible defect was identified, documented and remedied.” It describes how he was allegedly harassed, denigrated, humiliated and treated with scorn and contempt, as well as being removed from investigations he was working on and blacklisted from transferring to other quality control positions within the company.

Mr Barnett took early retirement from Boeing in March 2017, at a time when the claim says he had been suffering from symptoms of depression and severe anxiety, and knew he was going to be fired. The lawsuit alleges the company continued to put pressure on him, for example by preventing friends who continued to work there from having any contact with him. Among the exhibits put forward in support of the claim are an email, in which he says, “Boeing has completely destroyed my outlook on life” and his handwritten final note, which says “I can’t do this any longer!! Enough!!”

Raised safety concerns

John Barnett worked for Boeing for 32 years. From 2010, he was employed as a quality manager at Boeing’s factory in North Charleston, South Carolina. The facility builds the 787 Dreamliner, a state-of-the-art airliner used mainly on long-haul routes. During his time at the factory, Mr Barnett raised a number of concerns with management about violations of safety procedures, as well as about defects in aircraft on the production line. He later took his concerns to the media. In 2019, he told the BBC that: under-pressure workers had been deliberately fitting sub-standard parts to aircraft on the production line workers had failed to follow procedures intended to track components through the factory, allowing defective components to go missing he had uncovered serious problems with oxygen systems on the 787, which could mean one in four breathing masks would not work in an emergency Boeing denied his assertions. However, a 2017 review by the US regulator, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), did uphold some of Mr Barnett’s concerns. It established that the location of at least 53 “non-conforming” parts in the factory was unknown, and that they were considered lost. Boeing was ordered to take remedial action. On the oxygen cylinders issue, the company said that in 2017 it had “identified some oxygen bottles received from the supplier that were not deploying properly”. But it denied that any of them were actually fitted on aircraft. Safety standards at Boeing have come under a harsh spotlight since an incident last year in which a disused door panel fell off a brand new 737 Max aircraft shortly after takeoff. The incident, which came five years after two previous catastrophic accidents involving the 737 Max, brought intense scrutiny of the company’s quality control procedures and conditions in the factory. The company appointed a new chief executive last year, industry veteran Kelly Ortberg, and has produced a detailed action plan to address concerns raised by regulators about issues on the factory floor. In response to the lawsuit being filed, Boeing issued a brief statement. “We are saddened by John Barnett’s death and extend our condolences to his family,” it said. Previously, however, the company has pushed back against the allegations made against it, telling the BBC: “Boeing reviewed and addressed quality issues that Mr Barnett raised before he retired in 2017, as well as other quality issues referred to in the complaint. Engineering analysis determined the issues he raised did not affect airplane safety.” It also drew attention to a decision made earlier in Mr Barnett’s case, in 2020, in which the US Occupational Safety and Health Administration concluded the company had not breached whistleblower protection law. It added: “We appreciate employees who raise their voice, and we have systems in place to encourage them to speak up confidentially or anonymously.”

Will we see Venus Williams on a tennis court again?

Venus Williams is a five-time Wimbledon singles champion and won the US Open singles twice

At the end of March, Venus Williams will lose her world ranking and her page on the WTA Tour website will turn from purple to grey.

The seven-time Grand Slam singles champion will be considered an inactive player, having gone a whole year without competing.

But that status may not last long. The feeling persists that the American icon is not yet ready for retirement.

A wildcard for Indian Wells was announced but then swiftly declined. A “miscommunication” was the reason given.

Sources say Williams was then offered a wildcard for the Miami Open, which began on Tuesday and was the venue of her last match.

The 44-year-old thought about it for a couple of days - although it was no great surprise when she turned it down.

However, the Florida resident did take to the practice court there on Wednesday for a session with Tunisia’s Ons Jabeur.

Indian Wells and Miami were the only two tournaments Williams played last year.

Her last Grand Slam appearance was at the 2023 US Open and her last victory at any level came against Veronika Kudermetova in Cincinnati two weeks before that.

The last time Williams played a full schedule was 2019.

It was some achievement to do so in the year she turned 39, having been diagnosed with Sjogren’s syndrome, external - an autoimmune condition which can cause fatigue and joint pain - a few years earlier.

But turning 45 - which she will do just two weeks before Wimbledon on 17 June - is historically not a barrier to competing on tour. After all, Martina Navratilova won a singles match at the All England Club aged 47.

Should Williams request a wildcard for either Wimbledon, where she is a five-time singles champion, or for the US Open, where she won the singles title twice, it seems unlikely it would be rejected.

Fashion is a big part of Williams’ life and she was at Paris Fashion Week two weeks ago - one of the reasons she did not play in Indian Wells.

She owns the interior design company V Starr but, even though more than 30 years have passed since her professional debut, many feel she will attempt a final foray into professional tennis.

It is possible Williams, who is ranked number 1,151, will never retire.

Former US Open and French Open champion Svetlana Kuznetsova has not played since Wimbledon 2021, but is yet formally to call it a day.

Venus’ sister Serena, meanwhile, did not like the word retirement, preferring instead to “evolve away from the sport” in September 2022.

Serena’s name does, however, appear on the International Tennis Integrity Agency’s retired players list.

Joining that list is a strong commitment to retiring, as any player who later changes their mind must make themselves available for drug testing for six months before returning to play.

It means Venus could still expect a visit from out-of-competition testers. But she no longer needs to submit details of her daily whereabouts as she was removed from the international registered testing pool last June - a usual process for singles players who drop out of the world’s top 100.

Williams has not played frequently enough to qualify as either a full or associate member of the WTA Tour this year, but she has also not completed a WTA retirement form.

To play again she would need to fill out an annual player form and find a $250 administration fee from the nearly $43m of prize money she has earned.

Her management team did not respond to a request for information about her plans and it seems Williams will keep us guessing a little longer. Any ideas she might have for the summer have not been widely shared within the sport.

Many retirement tributes have been written and signed off a long time ago.

They may still need updating.

Caribbean Development Bank Forecasts Moderate Economic Growth in 2025 Amid Global and Domestic Risks

BRIDGETOWN, BARBADOS: The Caribbean Development Bank (CDB) projects regional economic growth of 2.5% in 2025, excluding Guyana, with overall growth reaching 4.6% when Guyana's oil-driven expansion is factored in. Despite a steady outlook, CDB's Director of Economics, Mr. Ian Durant cautioned that challenges such as geopolitical tensions, climate risks, and the inability to execute critical infrastructure projects in a timely manner could impact economic performance.

Addressing the Banks Annual News Conference on March 19, 2025, Mr. Durant said, "While the Caribbean economy is set for continued expansion, sustaining growth will require strategic policy action. Strengthening resilience to climate change, taking steps to facilitate the diversification of foreign exchange earning activity, and maintaining sound fiscal management must remain top priorities."

Regional GDP growth, excluding Guyana, slowed to 1.7% in 2024 from 2.5% in 2023, as post-pandemic recovery momentum eased. Fifteen of CDB's Borrowing Member Countries (BMCs) surpassed pre-pandemic output levels. Guyana led regional performance with a 43.5% expansion, while Haiti remained in crisis, suffering its sixth economic contraction due partly to political instability and inflationary pressures. Service-exporting economies experienced a slowdown, with growth at 1.6% compared to 2.8% in 2023. Tourism arrivals remained strong, exceeding pre-pandemic levels in several BMCs, while construction was another key economic driver, bolstered by infrastructure investments and private-sector developments.

While inflation moderated, and unemployment declined in most countries, Hurricane Beryl's devastation across multiple BMCs underscored the region's vulnerability to climate shocks. Fiscal positions strengthened, with most BMCs achieving primary surpluses, though public sector wages and infrastructure spending increased. While debt levels increased in nominal terms, the regional debt-to-GDP ratio declined to 50.9% from 55.6% in 2023, and five BMCs - Anguilla, Barbados, Belize, Jamaica, and Suriname - received sovereign credit rating upgrades.

Economic expansion in 2025 is expected to be driven by continued strength in tourism and construction. Service-exporting economies are forecasted to grow by 2.2%, while commodity exporters are set to gain momentum. However, risks remain, including potential slowdowns in major trading partners, geopolitical uncertainty, and climate-related disruptions. Delays in infrastructure execution could also dampen growth.

"To sustain growth, countries must accelerate structural reforms and execute infrastructure projects efficiently," the chief economist advised. "Policy consistency and resilience-building measures will be critical in navigating uncertainties."

The CDB highlights three key areas for action in 2025:

- Investing in Climate Resilience particularly disaster preparedness and climate-proofing infrastructure.

- Accelerating economic diversification by modernising trade infrastructure and the institutional framework that supports and regulates businesses.

- Increasing fiscal discipline through sound fiscal policies and institutional reforms to ensure sustainable growth and debt stability.

"The Caribbean's path forward demands bold action," Mr. Durant emphasised. "The CDB remains committed to supporting its member countries with financial resources, technical expertise, and strategic guidance."

To provide further insights, the CDB will publish a Caribbean Economic Review and Outlook in April 2025.

Azul Cayon Rockets Take the Lead in NBGC Premier League Table After Dominant Victory

Basseterre, St. Kitts - March 16, 2025 - The Azul Cayon Rockets have surged to the top of the NBGC Premier League table on goal difference following a commanding 3-0 victory over Jones Group Sandy Point FC on Saturday, March 15, at Warner Park. The win places Cayon level on nine points with SOL IAS Conaree FC but with a superior goal difference of +8 compared to Conaree’s +7.

Match Summary: Azul Cayon Rockets 3 - 0 Jones Group Sandy Point(Halftime Score: 2-0 in favor of Cayon)

Scorers for Cayon Rockets:

- * Ahmalie Dyer (own goal by Sandy Point) - 3rd minute
- * Mervin Lewis (penalty kick) - 27th minute
- * Raheem Davis - 59th minute

Notably, the Azul Cayon Rockets have yet to concede a goal in four matches, highlighting their defensive prowess. Assistant Coach Valentine Anthony expressed his satisfaction with the team’s performance, emphasizing their disciplined approach and consistency on the field. “For us to keep going like this, I think it all depends on the training, coming from the training ground, how we train and how we deal with our players, when to rest players and when to play players; those sort of stuff,” he said.

Assistant Coach of Sandy Point, Lydia Liburd, acknowledged the setback but remained optimistic, stating that the team will regroup and move forward. “The game plan that we utilised was not really implemented and so that would cost us the first two goals. We came back out in the second half and we tried something different and we were able to do better. So I think we just have to work on that,” she said.

Other Weekend Results:

SL Horsfords St. Pauls United 3 - 1 Tropical Blossom Hot Spring Bath United(Halftime Score: 2-1 in favor of St. Pauls)

SKN Athletics Announces Postponement Of 2025 RAMS Interprimary And TCD Tnterschool Track & Field Championships

Basseterre, St. Kitts - [18th March 2025] - The St. Kitts & Nevis Athletics Association (SKN Athletics) regrets to announce that the highly anticipated Rams Inter-Primary School Championship and the TDC Interschool Championships have been postponed until further notice.

This difficult decision comes after extensive deliberations with key stakeholders, including the Ministries of Education and Sports in both St. Kitts and Nevis, as well as principals and athletic coordinators from primary and secondary schools across the Federation. Despite exhaustive eff orts to finalize a feasible date and secure a suitable venue, these critical logistics remain unresolved.

SKN Athletics remains committed to ensuring that our young athletes have a fair and competitive platform to showcase their talents. We understand the significance of these events in fostering national pride, athletic development, and school spirit. As such, we continue to work diligently with all relevant parties to confi rm a new date and venue that will uphold the integrity and high standards of these championships.

We appreciate the patience and understanding of athletes, parents, coaches, and the wider public as we navigate these challenges. Rest assured, our priority is to provide an optimal and safe environment for all participants. We are optimistic that a resolution will be reached soon and will provide timely updates as new information becomes available.
